M'BRIDE'S GAP SITE LEADS ALL OTHERS

Reasonably Certain it Will be Chosen for New Penitentiary.

FINAL DECISION SOON

Warden Francies With Engineers from State Health Department and State Water Commission Spend Several Days on the Ground.

To say positively that the proposed new penitentiary will be located on the McBride's Gap site would be stating more than is warranted by the actual facts in the case. That it is reasonably certain the new prison will not only come to Centre County but that McBride's Gap will be the site taken is a statement which is warranted by the facts as they exist at this writing. A definite decision in the matter may come almost any day.

During the last week Warden John Francies, of the western penitentiary, spent several days going over the McBride's Gap and Boalsburg sites. Engineers representing the State Water Commission and also experts from the State Health Department were on both sites, taking water measurements and examining into the quality of the water. Their work was concluded on Monday. On the same day Warden Francies returned to Pittsburg, having been called there by a case in court. It had been his intention to remain here a day or two longer. He expects to return to this section in the next few days. Meanwhile he will have in hand the formal reports of the engineers who inspected the two sites this week.

A development of this week's visit by Warden Francies was the securing of additional options on lands adjacent to the McBride's Gap site. These cover many acres of mountain land from which the water drains into the McBride's Gap stream. Owners of these lands who signed the options desired by Warden Francies are authority for the statement that instead of being written by hand each was a printed document and with the name "Centre County" printed therein.

While at "The Republican" office on Saturday of last week, Warden Francies talked informally in regard to the penitentiary plans. He appreciates that the public is impatient for a definite decision as to which site will be selected. As he remarked, however, the responsibility of choosing the right site will not rest upon those not officially connected with the project. He added that not until he is fully satisfied in his own mind, but also fortified with the formal reports of engineers and other experts, will a final decision be made. Once this point is reached there will be no delay by Governor Tener in approving the recommendation and ordering work started on the project.

Warden Francies did not venture any opinion as to just when a final decision will be reached. He did say, however, that it would be in the immediate future.

General Meade Commission.

Governor Tener on Monday appointed the following to be members of the General George Gordon Meade Statue Commission: N. J. Kinsley, commander Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Pennsylvania, Franklin; Senator William C. Sproul, Chester; Representative James A. Dale, York; John W. Frazier, general chairman of the committee on Meade Statue, Philadelphia Brigade, Philadelphia. The bill creating this commission provides for the erection of a statue to the memory of George Gordon Meade, in the city of Washington, and makes an appropriation of $20,000 for the purpose of carrying into effect its provisions.

Alimony for Husband.

A husband sued for divorce is entitled to alimony and support under certain conditions, according to a decision of the supreme court handed down on Monday at Bismarck, North Dakota. The husband defendant declared he was entitled to money for his support during the trial of the case. "A separate and equitable action, as the suit of a husband against his wife, will lie to compel the wife to support and maintain the husband when amply able to do so, and when she has not been deserted or abandoned by the husband, when he, because of age and infirmity, is unable to gain his own livelihood'" says the supreme court.

Married at Aaronsburg.

On Saturday, November 25, Harry H. Leitzel and Mrs. Rheuie E. Boob, both of Millheim, were married by Rev. W. D. Donat.

BATTLE WITH WOUNDED BUCK

Hunter's Thrilling Experience with an Infuriated Deer.

To have been dreadfully wounded in an encounter with a powerful buck which he had shot and undertook to finish by cutting its throat was the fate of Orwell Farrell in the Cross Fork region, in the upper end of the county, on his first day in this deer-killing season, says the Lock Haven "Express." Farrell suffered greatly from loss of blood from a bad cut on the arm caused by the blade of his hunting knife striking it after the weapon had been driven from his grasp by a violent stroke of the deer's fore leg. The scene of this sanguinary battle, which came near terminating Farrell's life, was in a deep rhododendron thicket into which the wounded deer had sought refuge, but whose hiding place was discovered by Farrell by the aid of the light tracking snow that lay on the ground that morning.

Farrell had gone for deer alone. He knew of the haunt of a family of deer along the upper Kettle Creek, one of which was a ponderous buck with magnificent horns. Farrell had caught sight of him early in the fall while trailing a bee tree in that section. Farrell stayed in a bark shanty all night, and it was hardly daybreak when he took his place on the crest of a ridge along which he calculated the deer must come some time during the day in search of food. At 8 o'clock Farrell, caught the sound of a rifle shot far across the valley. Hardly 10 minutes afterward he saw a moving object skinning the edge of the opposite ridge fully a quarter of a mile away. The landscape was sparsely covered with the light fall of snow, and against this he discerned the running form of a fine buck. The animal seemed to be in no especial hurry, though, and as it was veering somewhat toward him as it ran Farrell waited until it had begun to descend the side of the ridge toward the thicket.

Then he fired. The deer dropped sideways, indicating that the bullet had taken effect in its hindquarters. A second shot went wild; at least there was nothing to indicate that it had hit. By this time the deer had regained its feet and in another instant it had put a large tree between itself and the hunter. Under cover of this protection it made its way into the depths of the ravine.

Without the snow to aid him Farrell would have lost the deer, as it was playing a game of shrewdness beyond anything that he had ever beheld.

Farrell went at once to the tree near which the deer had been hit and took up the trail. There was no showing of blood, but the draggling, slipping appearance of the tracks as they went down the side hill showing plainly that the deer was badly wounded. A little further on there began to be a showing of blood upon the snow. The wounded deer had gone into the very thickest of the rhododendron swamp and finally beyond a high protecting log Farrell saw the protruding antlers. He shot low enough to calculate a vital spot, and as the rifle cracked the deer's head dropped. Believing he had finished the animal, Farrell leaped across the log and whipping out his hunting knife, was about to cut the deer's throat, when the animal its eyes blazing in the last ray of animal vigor, raised on its fore feet, and with one of these, as quickly as a prize fighter would deliver a blow, struck out at Farrell before he had time to fall back out of its way.

The blow came in contact with his arm, which grasped the open knife, and the weapon was driven against Farrell's arm, just above the wrist. Though he wore a thick coat and had on a pair of gloves, the blade penetrated these and gouged an ugly wound in the arm, from which the blood flowed in a stream. The exertion on the part of the deer was a final one, for it fell back, weak and dying.

Though wounded himself, Farrell recovered his knife and cut the deer's throat, then dragged it in such position as to make the blood flow complete.

Realizing that his wound should receive attention, Farrell climbed to the crest of the ridge and fired a signal of shots in the hope that he might attract the attention of the gunners whose shot he had heard, and which shot in all probability had set his deer running. But there was no answer.

Farrell managed to form a tourniquet with his handkerchief and a stick, and then he set out toward the open. He had two miles to travel through the woods before he reached the nearest house, and when he arrived there he was sick and weak from loss of blood. He was unable to go back after the big game, but directing others to the place where he had shot the buck, they were soon able to trace out the location of the carcass. The deer was a fine specimen, one whose neck was almost as thick as a young buffalo's.

TAKES LIFE BY PLUNGE INTO CIRCULAR SAW

James Malone Kills Himself at George Thompson's Mill, at Alto.

HIS HEAD CUT OFF

Unfortunate Young Man Was in Ill Health and Depressed by Secret Trouble—Formerly Lived at Scotia—Survived by Young Wife.

Depressed by ill health and some troubles, the nature of which are not for publication, James Malone an employe at George B. Thompson's sawmill, at Alto, early yesterday morning stepped onto a rapidly moving circular saw and was instantly killed. His head and one hand were severed from the body.

Coroner S. M. Huff, of Milesburg, visited the scene of the accident several hours later and conducted an inquest. The verdict rendered by the Coroner's jury was one of suicide. Malone was uged 27 years and until operations were partially stopped at the Scotia mines some months ago lived and was employed there. He is survived by a young wife.

Immediately upon arriving at the Thompson sawmill, which is located in the barrens about three miles from Scotia, Coroner Huff empaneled the the following jury: George B. Thompson, Henry Wagner, William Harris, Homer Kreamer, E. E. Tressler and E. K. Shiffer. After examining several witnesses, including employes at the Thompson mill, the jury rendered a verdict that Malone had taken his own life.

The means taken to commit suicide are without a parallel. Malone, who when he worked at Scotia was a fine, jolly young fellow, arose yesterday morning and remarked to his wife that he wasn't feeling very well. When he appeared at the mill he seemed to be under a great strain, although he did not indicate to the other employes that he had any thought of committing suicide.

About 8 o'clock Malone, whose work did not call for his presence near the circular saw, suddenly appeared at that point. Without a word he stepped upon the log carriage, only to be quickly warned off by the head sawyer. The carriage was stopped and Malone was notified to keep out of danger. When the carriage was again started Malone deliberately stepped onto it and the next instant jumped head foremost into the saw, which was moving at lightning speed. In a second's time his body, cut into several pieces, was scattered about the floor.

With a smothered cry the head sawyer stopped the saw and called to his fellow-workmen to come to his assistance. There was nothing left for them to do but to pick up the several pieces of Malone's body. Mr. Thompson, upon being notified, telephoned to Coroner Huff and the latter at once responded. The inquest soon revealed sufficient to prompt the jury to return a verdict of suicide.

No arrangements had been made yesterday for the funeral. Malone's parents are buried in a cemetery in Bellefonte.

Tyrone Merchant Dead.

Joseph M. Bayer, one of Tyrone's most prominent citizens and business men, died suddenly at his late home there on Saturday evening of last week. He was seated in a chair and suffered an attack of acute indigestion. He was identified with the well known Bayer-Gillam company, wholesale grocers, and was active in the business, religious and social life of Tyrone. He was born in Washington county Maryland, and was 61 years of age. Interment was made on Tuesday at Hagerstown, Maryland.

A Bride of Sixteen.

George A. Noll, of near Bellefonte, and Miss Beatrice L. Mesmer, of State College, on Tuesday secured a marriage license from Register Earle C. Tuten and during the afternoon they were married by Squire W. H. Musser. The bride gave her age as 16 years, the consent of her parents being filed with the application for the license.

23 patients in the Hospital.

WITH RIFLE IN HAND STOPPED LUMBER JOB

Darb Swisher, of Near Julian, in Jail Pending Trial.

SAY HE MADE THREATS

Warrant for His Arrest Issued on Information by John C. Rumberger, Superintendent at Lincoln Musser's Sawmill, in Huston Twp.

Charged with brandishing a double-barreled rifle and compelling all hands to stop work at L. H. Musser's sawmill, near Julian, Darb Swisher was last Thursday arrested and lodged in jail here. Swisher is a lumberman and resides near Julian. The warrant was issued on information by John C. Rumberger, superintendent at the Musser mill. Swisher demanded an immediate hearing and asked to be released under bail, but on direction of District Attorney Runkle he was committed to jail by Squire Musser. On Tuesday District Attorney Runkle notified Squire Musser that a hearing would not be held and that the case should be returned to court, which convenes on the first Monday in December.

Swisher, it is said, claims to own a part of the timber being cut by Mr. Musser. On Thursday of last week, it is alleged, he appeared at the sawmill and commanded Mr. Rumberger and several others there to stop work at once. Taking into consideration that Swisher was armed with a double-barreled winchester rifle, the command was obeyed in less time than it takes to tell it. Mr. Rumberger at once came to Bellefonte, where he made information against Swisher. Constable Montgomery served the warrant on Swisher and brought him to Bellefonte on the same day.

The information made by Mr. Rumberger, which he signed as superintendent for L. H. Musser, charges that Swisher, who is about 45 years old, "did then and there enter upon the premises [illegible] township, when the employes were engaged at the sawmill and did order the said employes to shut down the mill, that the said Swisher was armed with a double-barreled winchester rifle and that he dared the employes to touch any of the ties or run the mill. That he did then there make an assault upon your affiant and put your affiant and John M. Green, Adam Boyer and Frank M. Wilson in bodily fear. Your affiant further avers that the said Darb Swisher threatened to do your affiant and the other employes bodily harm if they should attempt to run the mill and manufacture lumber. Your affiant further avers that he afraid of the said Darb Swisher and that he is in fear of his life."

Lewisburg Judge Dead.

For the second time within a month death on Sunday entered the portals of the court house of Union county and claimed one of the official members of the court, Associate Judge William W. Brown. Judge Brown was aged 69 years and had until the first of January, 1912, to serve. The other Union county court house official who died recently wss T. Edward Halfpenny, prothonotary and clerk. Ned T. Church was appointed to serve out his unfinished term. Judge Brown was a resident of the vicinity of White Deer for many years. He is survived by several daughters. His wife died a number of years ago. The funeral was held at his home on East Market street, Lewisburg, on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Burial was made in the Lewisburg cemetery.

Hawk Run Station Robbed.

Some time during Sunday night robbers gained an entrance into the New York Central station at Hawk Run by breaking open a window, and while only about $1.00 in money was secured, stole practically all the local and foreign tickets, two punches, ticket stamp, lantern and a few other articles. A number of valuable express packages were opened, but for some reason the contents were not stolen.

Nasty Cut Under Eye.

On Monday morning Daniel McMonigal, of Port Matilda, met with a peculiar and also a very painful accident. He drove to Tyrone and while there was engaged in repairing a horse collar. The sharp knife with which he was working slipped off the leather collar and cut a long gash under his left eye. He was immediately removed to the office of a nearby physician, where the injury was dressed.

WE GIVE THANKS

Some Reasons Why "The Republican" Rejoices on Thanksgiving Day.

"The Republican" extends to its many friends Thanksgiving greetings. We have much to be grateful for and for these and numerous other reasons we give thanks:

Because we are blessed with health.

Because we have had a year of constantly growing business.

Because a great big turkey from J. W. Foreman's farm, near Curtin, reposes on ye editor's dinner table.

Because seven years ago this Thanksgiving Day we banished from us the reveries of a bachelor and now are blessed with the best wife and the two greatest children in the world.

Because the circulation of "The Republican" now ranks third highest among all of the newspapers in Centre County, representing 500 subscribers in and about Bellefonte; approximately 100 in and about Howard; a like number in State College and the surrounding country; 71 at Port Matilda; 60 at Pleasant Gap; upward of 90 at Clarence; approximately 40 at Scotia; 50 or more at Snow Shoe; 50 at Milesburg, and so on all through Centre County.

But this is not all. We are thankful, yea verily we are thankful, that the Democratic majority three weeks ago wasn't any larger.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY

Ear of Young Man Almost Torn Off in Accident at Pine Grove Mills.

On Saturday evening of last week a trio of young fellows, James Kelley, Wharton and Dallas Weller, of Erbtown, were driving to Pine Grove Mills and when near the B. C. R. station a shaft came loose and the horse frightened and run away. The evening was dark and the occupants of the buggy were thrown out. The horse was not caught until it had reached a point a mile east of Pine Grove Mills. The horse was not much injured, but the young men did not fare so well. Kelley and Wharton Weller were painfully bruised and shaken up, but young Dallas Weller was more seriously injured. He was severely cut on the face and head. One ear was almost completely [illegible], the [illegible] being held by a small piece of cartilage. He was removed to the office of Dr. G. H. Woods, at Pine Grove Mills, where it was necessary to place forty stitches in sewing up his wounds. At this writing he is in a critical condition.

Political Gossip.

It was rumored that Commissioners-elect Noll and Grove planned meeting on Tuesday, last, to select the several clerks and attaches at the Court House. Apparently the meeting was not held, local political leaders saying they knew nothing about it. It is said that either James Corl, now at Chicago, or Harry Meyer, of Millheim, stands a good chance for being appointed chief clerk to the Commissioners. John Trafford is said to be scheduled for appointment as a janitor. Register-elect Smith has decided to reappoint Miss Anna Nolan as deputy. Treasurer-elect John D. Miller has engaged G. W. Rumberger, of Unionville, to assist him while he familiarizes himself with the office. It is understood that Mr. Miller will in the near future remove from Hublersburg to Bellefonte. Sheriff-elect Lee may appoint E. C. McKinley of Milesburg, as his deputy. At the recent primaries McKinley was an unsuccessful aspirant for the Democratic nomination for Recorder. N. B. Spangler, Esq., will likely be chosen as solicitor for both the new Sheriff and the new Treasurer. W. D. Zerby, Esq., it is understood, will be appointed solicitor for the County Commissioners. D. F. Fortney, Esq., is also an applicant. Prothonotary Kimport, who retires, will remain in Bellefonte until April to settle up his books. The new Prothonotary, D. R. Foreman, probably will not appoint a deputy until after that time. Recorder-elect Speer has not indicated who will be appointed as his deputy.

Died at Danville.

A telegram was received at Philipsburg on Monday announcing the death of John Shiveler, for many years a well known resident of that place, which occured at Danville, whither he was taken about eight years ago because of the enfeebled condition of his mind. The deceased was born August 1, 1834. He was a soldier in the civil war, being a member of Co. K, 105th Pennsylvania regiment.

Most of the Bellefonte hotels have prepared a special Thanksgiving dinner for today. Landlord Daggett, of the Bush House, has had printed a very pretty Thanksgiving menu card which will be presented to each guest as a souvenir.

BUSINESS MEN MAKE THREE STRONG MOVES

Initial Steps Taken for Business Getting Board of Trade.

EXTRA HOLIDAY TRAIN

Guarantee Cost for Third Train to Coburn 3 Days During Christmas Week—Urge Building Railroad from Lemont to State College.

Three progressive movements which should prove to be business winners have been taken by Bellefonte business men in the last few days. The activity displayed along practical lines is perhaps the most aggressive and promising that has been witnessed in Bellefonte in many a day.

First, the nucleus of a Board of Trade was organized—that is, a Board of Trade that is intended to get busy and amount to something in the way of attracting new business enterprises to Bellefonte. A permanent organization will be effected at a meeting to be held on Tuesday morning, December 5, at 11 o'clock, in the Council chamber.

Second, a petition was circulated and later presented to the Pennsylvania Railroad, strongly urging that a connecting spur be built between Lemont and State College. It is conceded by all that the building of this short piece of railroad will result in additional business for our local merchants.

The third movement is one calculated to bring practical results in the more immediate future. At the instance of the Bellefonte merchants, the Pennsylvania Railroad will on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, December 20, 21 and 22, run a special train from Bellefonte to Coburn, leaving Bellefonte each afternoon at 5.30 o'clock. This will be done for the accommodation of Penns valley shoppers desiring to do their shopping in Bellefonte during that week. Any person will be welcome to use this train with no expense additional to the regular railroad fare.

It has long been appreciated that Penns valley shoppers have not had adequate train service out of Bellefonte. During the holiday season virtually all trains are late in arriving in Bellefonte. As a result, Penns valley visitors had an hour or two at the most in which to do their shopping. This naturally diverted much business from Bellefonte that would otherwise have come here. This year it will be different. Ad. Fauble took charge of the project to provide for the additional train on December 20, 21 and 22, and as a consequence Penns valley shoppers will be able to come to Bellefonte on the regular morning train and have until 5.30 in the afternoon in which to make their purchases.

Now that they have started things moving along such practical lines, the merchants should not fall down on a matter equally important. It is not only necessary to get shoppers to Bellefonte, but it is equally important to show them in advance what they may purchase once they are here. The merchants should follow up the good work already done by the most liberal advertising campaign ever conducted in Belletonte. Intelligent, judicious advertising has "made good" everywhere else in the world, and it will "make good" in Bellefonte. It is up to our merchants to avail themselves of the advertising columns of "The Republican" and other newspapers.

Important if True.

On Saturday afternoon a buxom young lass stopped in at one of the Philipsburg drug stores to make some purchases. One of the articles she bought was cold cream. "During this cold weather," she said to the genial and very courteous young clerk, "I find it very difficult to keep the 'chaps' away." The more the young drug clerk looked at her, with the bloom on her cheek and the sparkle in her eye, the more he thought, "that's so."

Death of Old Soldier.

James Mayes, a well known and highly respected resident of Lamar and an old soldier who did splendid service in defense of the flag, died at his late home at Lamar on Wednesday of last week. His death was due to heart failure. In his early life Mr. Mayes was an ax grinder. In more recent years he retired from active work. He was aged 76 years and is survived by a widow, three sons and three daughters. Funeral services were held on Sunday morning.

It is rumored that Lawyer W. Harrison Walker is looking sideways at the next Democratic nomination for the Legislature.

BOMB FOR GOVERNOR

Tener Fortunately Turned it Over to a Post Office Inspector.

An attempt to end the life of Governor John K. Tener, while on a recent visit to his home at Charleroi was made by some unidentifired would-be assassin, who sent the Governor an infernal machine.

Governor Tener was at Charleroi while attending the river celebration and national mining bureau demonstrations in Pittsburg the early part of this month. While there a mysterious package was sent to him through the local post office from Philadelphia. The Governor was afraid to open it, and turned it over to Postmaster J. E. McArdle, who locked it in the strong box at the local office until the arrival of Post Office Inspector Williams, whom he notified, and who arrived last Saturday and took charge of the package.

Before opening the package Inspector Williams saturated it thoroughly with water, then cut the box with a penknife and tore it away from the contents. The inspector found a pasteboard cylinder about eight or nine inches long, at one end of which was a picture of Colonel Roosevelt. The device was labeled with a printed slip, which said:

"Memorial to State's heroes dedicated. Driver the Republican bosses out."

The interior of the cylinder was filled with powder, covered with some other substance, not yet analyzed, but from its appearance supposed to be an explosive compound of some nature. In the middle of the cylinder was a match with a piece of bent steel arranged so it would strike the match when the package was opened, and ignite it. Running the greater length of the tube and attached to the match was a fuse. There also was a bullet-shaped piece of lead in the cylinder. Inspector Williams was afraid to touch off the explosive.

Fatally Burned at Butchering.

George Sweigert, 45 years old, died at his home near Horningsford a short distance from Lewistown, during last Friday night from burns sustained earlier in the day from an exploding can of gasoline. Miss Anna Grassmyer and her mother, widow of Henry Grassmyer, are in a precarious condition from burns and shock sustained in a vain attempt to save the victim's life by tearing his clothing from his body.

Mr. Sweigart was engaged in butchering a hog at the Grassmyer home and had taken a can of gasoline to the open fireplace to assist in prompt combustion of the damp wood under the kettle. Miss Grassmyer heard what she supposed was the report of the gun used to kill the porker but paid little attention until she saw a human torch running towards the house.

Naturally of a nervous temperament, she became almost frenzied in the emergency and literally tore the clothing from his body with her bare hand, burning herself in a frightful manner. The mother, in bed an invalid, whose death was hourly expected, became so excited that she tried to arise from her bed and suffered a relapse in consequence.

The can was found shattered some distance from the fire and burning oil scattered for a radius of thirty feet from the fire. Sweigart was a bachelor and had worked on the section under the Grassmyers, father and son, for the past twenty-two years.

Keep always in the tiouse. Refuse substitutes. Sold by C. hM.Parish.

Livestock and Poultry.

Some wheat bran in the ration is most suitable for the brood sows. It keeps the system cool and the bowels open.

Be sure there are narrow doors for the ewes to crowd through. One jam may cause the loss of a lamb, or both ewe and lamb.

Do not try to winter the cows without grain. Wheat bran, corn-meal and oil-meal will be found valuable.

The cow your neighbor does not want to sell is the one you want to buy. Get around this dilemma by raising that kind yourself.

Going to the shop over icy roads with smooth shoes may ruin your best horse.

Wetting the hoofs with a sponge and clean water every day, or simply dipping each foot into a pail of water, will keep the feet from becoming dry.

A horse's teeth get out of condition as readily as do your own. Nowadays when one of our horses goes off feed, we at once look to his teeth before giving any other treatment.

With the beginning of winter there is less work for the horse, and he stands idle in the stable sometimes for days together. To avoid scratches, keep the legs of the horse free from mud, and the stalls clean and dry.

A horse is a good deal like a man. If you keep him bundled up in a heavy blanket in the barn, he will be almost frozen when you take him out-of-doors. You would not think of wearing an overcoat in the house, would you? If you blanket your horse at all in the stable, let it be with a light stable-blanket.

Winter eggs and exercise go together.

Do not neglect the laying hen's exercise.

Judge not a hen by her beauty, but by the way she does her duty.

You may feed all the food your hens can possibly use, but if you are short of grit, the results will not be satisfactory.

It is not good for hens to dust in coal or wood ashes only, some folks claim, but we find that a few ashes lighten up the dirt.

Noon is a good time to supply the stock with some green stuff, such as cabbages or roots of any kind. The latter can be cut in half, and the hens will then pick them to pieces.

Have the floors of the houses well bedded with some light litter, so that the biddies will be induced to scratch, and thus warm up their bodies these cold, frosty mornings.

Drafts in the chickens' home are more dangerous when the fowls are quiet on the roost than when they are stirring around during the day; but a cold air current sweeping through the house is a bad thing at any time.

As the cold winds come in the fall, it is noticed that the flocks do not take so wide a range as they did in milder, weather, but, instead, congregate in corn-fields and along the stone fences in the pastures, where they can get the benefit of the warm sun, and at the same time be shielded from the raw winds.

Poultry feeding has been much improved and simplified by the introduction of the hopper method. The old-fashioned way of preparing and mixing a wet mash is done away with, on account of its tedious and needless expense of time and labor. The hopper is filled with a variety of ground grains, and placed where it is accessible to the fowls at all times. With this arrangement the hens need never go to roost without sufficient food.—Farm Journal.

Feminine Frivols.

Lace is used as ruffles on skirts of evening frocks.

Many of the newest evening coats are made with a single seam.

Sealskin, lynx, sable, black marten, ermine and mink are the millinery furs.

Thick ribbed voile, almost corduroy in appearance, is used in some of the handsome imported costumes.

Braid, beads and buttons are to be seen in the decorations of blouses, while tiny vests of tucked chiffon tor net give an air of smartness to many of the more elaborate blouses.

One of the new millinery shapes is called the gable, because it is shaped like a gable house. Its two sides slant down sharply from the top of the head to below the ears and the trimming is usually a daring and defiant bow perched on one side.

Three things must match your dress—your shoes, bag and hat.

Bows on Paris model hats are most voluminous affafrs and ten yards is not an exaggerated amount to use.

Charmeuse continues to be the fashionable fabric for afternoon wear. The favorite trimming is silk fringe.

Black velvet has been made up into long coats for afternoon wear, cape coats are quite the newest thing. Frequently a straight coat will have an outer cape like arrangement reaching to the hem of the skirt.

BEATTIE CONFESSED

Young Wife-Murderer Admitted Crime—Electrocuted at Richmond, Va.

Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., went to his death at dawn last Friday, at Richmond, Va., the self-confessed murderer of his young wife, although the confession was not made public until four hours after he had paid the toll exacted by the law. He maintained to the end the remarkable nerve he had exhibited since first he was accused of killing his wife on the lonely Midlothian turnpike last July. His last expression was a sneer when he observed the chair that was to launch him into eternity.

The confession was made public in the rotunda of a downtown hotel by the Rev. Benjamin Dennis, one of the ministers who had labored with Beattie to repent. As a matter of fact it was acknowledged by the minister, Beattie first admitted his guilt November 9, the day after he entered the death chamber and before the fruitless appeal for a commutation of sentence was made to Governor Mann. It was not until Friday that he would agree to its being put in writing for his signature. Then all hope that the governor would interfere was gone. The extraordinary document follows:

"I, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., desirous of standing right before God and man, do, on this, the 23d day of November, 1911, confess my guilt of the crime charged against me. Much that was published concerning the details was not true, but the awful fact, without the harrowing circumstances, remains. For this action I am truly sorry, and believing that I am at peace with God and am soon to pass into his presence, this statement is made."

Beattie's attitude throughout the trial and the imprisonment that waited only on his death, was a study for a psychologist. He read the newspapers avidly. Every reference to his iron nerve and the fact that he was going to the chair without acknowledging his crime, in the hope of saving his aged father further sorrow, according to those who were with him to the end, seemed to afford him supreme satisfaction. Apparently he gloated over the notoriety his crime had brought him.

Even after his confession he maintained his air of bravado. What had since November 9, been considered stoicism, was later recognized as cynicism. His remarkable nerve seems to have had its basis and support in the knowledge that he was being applauded as a man of Spartan courage and inflexible will.

The secret of his confession was held inviolate by the ministers until after his death. Not even the broken-hearted father knew of its existence, friends of the family declare. Not until four hours after he had been pronounced dead in the death chamber in state's prison were the murderer's attorneys cognizant that he had made a clean breast of his guilt. With the same intrepidity that had marked his conduct from the beginning Beattie went to the chair and brought the sordid story to a dramatic end.

The shock that killed Beattie was given at 7:19 o'clock in the morning. Three distinct and separate times the current was turned on and at 7.23 it was shut off. Doctors W. T. and St. Julien Oppenheimer a minute later announced that death had been instantaneous. The twenty-two persons in the death chamber thereupon filed out and the end of a lengthy and costly battle for justice had ended.

A Household Medicine.

What stops coughs quickly and cures colds is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Mrs. Anna Pelzer, 2526 Jefferson St., So. Omaha, Neb., says: "I can recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound as a sure cure for coughs and colds. It cured my daughter of a bad cold and my neighbor, Mrs. Benson, cured herself and her whole family with Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Everyone in our neighborhood speaks highly of it." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Bear Ambled into Town.

A big black bear shambled into State College last Wednesday and his presence caused quite a flutter of excitement among the nimrods, who turned out en masse, with all sorts of weapons, bent on securing a bear hide, says the State College Times.

Bruin was first seen by Hammil Holmes as it shambled across the clearing near Foster's woods. Bruin then made tracks for other quarters and skirted the southern end of town until it reached Allen street, where it nosed around the back yards of the residents in search of food.

Prof. A. J. Wood was somewhat startled when he saw the bear in his yard and at once sought cover. By this time every fellow who could get hold of a loaded gun was after Mr. Bear, but the fellow was too quick for them and made his way toward Nittany, where he sought shelter and safety in the friendly bush. So endeth the beartale.

A Mail Carrier's Load.

Seems heavier when he has a weak back and kidney trouble. Fred Duehren, Mail Carrier at Atchison, Kas., says: "I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and had a severe pain across my back. Whenever I carried a heavy load of mail, my kidney trouble increased. Some time ago, I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills and since taking them I have gotten entirely rid of all my kidney trouble and am as sound now as ever." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Fashion Notes.

New blouses and guimpes show either a closing directly in front, or one lapped to one side under three large buttons and whether the buttons are large or small, they are conspicuous for their beauty or for their decorative quality.

After black and white the popular color in millinery is royal purple.

Fichu bodices of every description are worn, white lace fichus being employed on dark silks and chiffons.

Sometimes there seems to be an effort to increase the size of the waist by belting the figure just at the thickest point, and, even then, belting it loosely. There are no more tight waistbands in the fashionable world.

An ingenious milliner has evolved some beautiful tassels from discarded willow plumes, and attached to a heavy silk cord, they are the sole trimming of a new high-pointed-crown black velour hat.

The most conspicuous features of autumn millinery are great height of the tall-peaked crowns, appearing on all sorts and conditions of hats, and the trimming, which is also employed to add its quota to the towering effects.

Very thick rouleaux of satin finish the waists of one-piece dresses and are twisted and arranged as ornaments at the top of the back panel, usually fastened at the side.

Pierrot millinery shape in velour, scratch beaver or French felt with high round-topped crowns and slightly rolled brims will be a popular feature of this fall's millinery.

Silver work on gray velvet, finished with a fringe of silver button or with one of gray chenille, makes a beautiful bag for an elderly woman, or for one who likes gowns of gray.

Three colors used more than any others in millinery are coronation purple, empire green and raspberry red.

Townships to Get Bonus.

Townships of Centre county which enforced the cash payment of road taxes last year have been notified of their allotment by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The vouchers for the payment of the money are being made out at the state highway department in Harrisburg. The bonus is allowed in accordance with the provisions of an act of assembly of 1905.

Under the old law each township which abolished the work tax system received in return from the state 15 per cent. of the moneys they expended on the roads. An act of 1911 provides that the townships with cash systems will receive bonuses of 50 per cent. of the moneys they spend on their highways, beginning with the fiscal year from June 1, 1911, to June 1, 1912.

Agitation for road improvements in the county in recent years has been fruitful. Many stretches of improved highways were built with state aid, and it is expected that next year will see a lot more built as links of the chain of highways to be built by the state at an approximate cost of $50,000,000.

Cut Off Her Handbag.

Miss Marietta Smith, the daughter of Luther H. Smith, of Huntingdon, who has been visiting relatives in Philadelphia was the victim of a daring purse-snatcher on Sunday evening. Accompanied by her cousin and Miss Ollie McMahon, also known in Huntingdon, she was walking down Broad Street about 6 o'clock. As the trio passed an alley, a young man darted out and with one slash cut the chain by which Miss Smith was carrying her hand bag with a couple of twists around her fingers. Back into the alley he darted as quickly as he came, so sudden being the attack that the young woman could not even identify the thief. Luckily Miss Smith had left her purse at the home she was visiting and but seventeen cents in loose change and some minor articles were in the bag.

"When we Were Boys Together."

Who can look back to his school days without a thrill of pleasure mixed with sadness? Noticing the pupils rush out with shout and laughter, a few days ago from one of the school buildings where in years long past I was one of the crowd of happy boys and girls that did the same thing, brought up reminiscences that were not all happy, for I thought of how many of those joyous] youngsters had gone to distant lands, how many were hopeless invalids and how many had been laid in their graves since that time. I thought too, of the troubles awaiting those who were so happy in the full glow of life that October day, and what a good thing it is that youth anticipates none of the cares of later life.—Somerset Vidette.

The Philipsburg Shirt Co. made and shipped last week to a party in Alliance, Ohio, a shirt which measured 68 inches at the breast, 21 inches around the neck, was 40 inches long, had armholes 32 inches in circumference and cuffs that measured 14 inches.—Philipsburg Journal.

RED CROSS SEALS

Proceeds of Sale for Prevention of Tuberculosis Campaign.

Monday marked the opening of the Red Cross Christmas Seal campaign in Pennsylvania. From now on in every city, town and hamlet the Christmas Seals will be bought by persons interested in the prevention of tuberculosis in this State. The Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has ordered 3,000,000. A million and a half of these have already been distributed, and during the next month the remainder will be placed throughout the State.

The seal used this year is better looking in design than last year's. It shows a snow scene with a farmhouse in the centre. Near it are two Christmas trees. Above the farmhouse are the words American Red Cross and the Red Cross itself, while below are printed Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. This year's seal, therefore, will make an attractive addition to Christmas presents and all packages.

The United States Government has given permission for the placing of the seals on the back of letters. From now on the mails will be full of the spirit of Christmas. Thousands of letters will carry on their backs the seal of the red cross. It is expected that this year's sale will exceed all others. Anybody can enlist in the fight against tuberculosis by buying one or more seals.

Last year 10,285 persons died of the White Plague in Pennsylvania. Every year the number is decreasing. The success of the fight against it depends upon the support given by the people. Every seal placed upon the back of letters, on packages and on Christma presents means a step forward in the struggle against the White Plague.

The headquarters of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis are at 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Altoona Boy's Jaws Unlock.

Completely recovered, with the exception of a slight stiffness in his ankles that will soon pass away, 16-year-old Louis Gunsallus, of Pottsgrove avenue, Altoona, can thank his lucky stars that he has recovered from one of the worst and most peculiar cases of tetanus or lockjaw in Pennsylvania medical history. Every whit of danger is now passed and the boy is able to walk around his own home. Only a few weeks ago he was raving so wildly that it took four strong men to hold him.

The trouble started from a puncture wound in his foot. The lad stepped twice on the same nail, causing two punctures of the foot. The tetanus did not develop until a month and ten days after the accident. For ten days the lad lay with his jaws locked so tight that they seemed drawn together by some supernatural power. Frequently he went into convulsions. Three brothers and his father were always around. Four men had to be. It took this many to hold him when he went into convulsions.

No Wedding Bells for Her.

The following item taken from the Sunbury papers will likely be of interest to our readers, "The man in the case" being well known in Tyrone: "The wedding of Dick Kauffman, the Milton athlete, widely circulated in this section is denied in the following letter from the supposed bride, received on the 20th instant from Los Angeles, California. It is as follows: 'Dear Sir: I received a notice today, or rather a clipping, reading as follows: Dick Kauffman, the well known young ball player of Milton, and Miss Helen Horton, of Selinsgrove, were recently married in Eureka, California, where he is playing ball and managing a hotel. The young people met while the groom was attending Susquehanna University.' This is not correct and I would like it to be corrected in your daily, as I am supposed to be the 'bride' and know nothing of it.' Respectfully yours, Helen M. Horton."

YEARLING TROUT

Fish Commissioner Buller Fixes Minimum Size for Distribution.

N. R. Buller, recently named as commissioner of fisheries by Governor John K. Tener, has issued a statement in which he outlines important changes in the conduct of the department of which he is the head. The new order of things will apply especially to the Bellefonte hatchery, which is to be made the largest trout hatchery in the country.

"In the distribution of trout in the future," says Buller, "it is proposed to send out yearlings so far as possible, except that in the fall, if the streams are in the proper condition, fish will then be shipped at a size varying from three to five inches. Where clubs and parties have built ponds or otherwise made arrangements for taking care of the young fish and carrying them to a mature age, the department expects much assistance and will ship the fish in the spring in the young stage, because that will relieve the department of the necessity of carrying them in its own waters to an advanced stage."

Wall-eyed pink, white fish, blue pike lake herring and shad, Buller says, will be shipped out in the fry stage, as in the past, because the enormous numbers in which they are hatched makes it impossible to raise them successfully at the hatcheries.

"The number of hatcheries in the state is not so much of a factor as the efficiency of the hatchery in producing fish." is Bullers's next statement, and he goes on to declare that the upbuilding of stations where the conditions are most favorable will secure better results in a more economical way than distributing the money over a number of stations, none of which is up to the highest state of efficiency.

Buller asks the full co-operation of every one in making the department of fisheries what he wishes it to be. He lays stress upon the need for co-operation from the farmer.

Pennsylvania's Financial Condition.

Detractors of the great State of Pennsylvania who are either misinformed or maliciously inclined can gather a valuable lesson from the statement recently issued regarding the financial condition of this Commonwealth. It may surprise many residents to learn that three-fourths of the remaining indebtedness the State will fall due on February first. It will probably be a matter of greater surprise to know that there is enough money, and more than enough, on hand to cover that amount, that there is, in fact, enough in the Sinking Fund to cover the entire debt and still leave a balance on the credit side of the ledger.

At the end of the last quarter, which was September 30, there was outstanding against the state $2,309,617.02. The Sinking Fund showed money on deposit to the amount of $2,389,368.20, making a surplus over and above all indebtedness of about $80,000.

At the end of the Civil War the indebtedness had reached $39,000,000. When one considers that this burden has gradually been decreased and that Pennsylvania all the time has forged ahead and always has "paid as she went," the belittling mouthings of persons suffering from the effects of mora ether following amputated ambitions, seem ridiculously puerile.

Pennsylvania is as sound as a dollar, and the Republican Party deserves the the credit for it.—Phila Inquirer

Dehorning Calves with Lye.

When the calf is two or three days old examine its head and as soon as the horns can be detected proceed as follows: Rub a little lard or other grease in the hair around the horn. Have ready a can of concentrated lye that has been opened long enough to become softened by absorbing moisture from the air, roll a bit of muslin into a roll the size of a lead pencil, dip the end of it into the softened lye and rub the top of the starting horn until the skin looks red. A couple of days later examine the horns. If a scab has formed over the top of the horn the job has been successful; if there is not a good scab, repeat the operation. One application is usually sufficient. The method is easy and safe, avoids the unpleasant task of cutting and sawing off grown horns and gives a better shaped head.—Missouri Ruralist.

Girls Race in Icy River.

Miss Mildred Sutherland of Brookline won a 100-yard swimming race from Miss Mabel Fayne in the cold water off the L street bathhouse, at Boston, last Friday, also a prize of $100 offered by George Harrington, of Providence. The girls entered the water at 10.45 and after the race did several bits of fancy swimming to show various strokes for the benefit of the spectators. The water registered only five degrees above freezing. Both girls said they had enjoyed their 20-minute swim immensely, and declared that they intended to repeat the performance. Miss Sutherline first appeared as a swimming expert about two years ago, when she gave several exhibitions of the back high dive before the Brookline Swimming Club, of which she is a member.

THE REAL SANS-GENE.

Story of Her Adventurous Career In the French Army.

Every one knows the washerwoman who was so familiar with Napoleon in Victorien Sardon's play "Mme. Sans-Gene," but the real Sans-Gene who lived at that time was a dragoon in one of the great Corsican's armies and spent twenty years in camps and barracks, in campaigns and battles over Europe. In the Musee de L'Armee in Paris there is a special case inside which stands her equestrian statue.

Her real name was Marie Therese Figueur, and she was born in Burgundy in 1774. When ten, at the end of the reign of terror, she enrolled in a cavalry regiment commanded by one of her uncles and soon acquired the nickname of Sans-Gene.

Mme. Sans-Gene fought in Germany with the French and Batavian armies, charged at Hohenlinden, took part in the siege of Toulon, was in the Italian, Spanish and Austrian campaigns and fought at Austerlitz and in Russia. During the hundred days the emperor conferred the Legion of Honor upon her, and she charged at Waterloo for the last time.

With the restoration she left the army to get married. She was then thirty. In the course of her marital career Sans-Gene had five horses shot under her and was wounded eight times in different engagements. She died in hospital in 1861.—London Globe.

PYRAMID OF CHEOPS.

It Would Take a Hundred Millions to Duplicate It Today.

One of the most familiar questions asked by "personally conducted" tourists visiting Egypt and the great pyramid built by Cheops is, "I wonder how much it cost to build it?" A building contractor with a head for figures and building estimates has estimated that the Cheops pyramid could not be duplicated today for less than $100,000,000. With modern machinery and the employment of 40,000 stonecutters, haulers, quarrymen, masons and laborers a duplicate of the pyramid could be erected in two years.

It has been calculated that the work really required the services of 100,000 men for thirty years. The Cheops pyramid occupies a space of 12¾ acres and is 746 feet high and contains 143,315,000 cubic yards of stone and granite. The material alone represents an item of $36,000,000, while the labor would increase this about by $72,000,000. To this must be added $3,000,000 for tools, transportation and similar items. The pyramid is built on a solid rock 150 feet deep, and to build a foundation of this character would add to the cost to the extent of making the total of $100,000,000.—New York World.

Vicarious Candy.

A group of children were playing in a gutter. A passerby walked slowly, watching the active preparations of a "little mother," aged about seven, who was marshaling her charges into order, apparently in preparation for some urban excursion. Something had gone wrong, and one small kid was howling.

"Shut your noise, Tommy Higgins, and be good this minute!" admonished the motheriet, with a promissory smack. "If you don't stop like I tell you I'll leave you right here in the mud gutter. You can't go wid us till yez closes yer noise and be's a good boy. Do you know where we're goin'? Well, we're goin' in the next block to the candy factory to smell the candies cookin'. And do you yer know what they're makin' today? Well, it's chocolate creams and pep'mint."—New York Press.

Monkeys Are Fighters.

"Most persons will guess lions or tigers are the most dangerous animals to train," said an animal trainer, "but they're wrong. Give a lion one good licking and he'll remember it. He hits back only when his man is down or has his back turned, but a monkey will fight against any odds, and you never can tell when he'll hit back. Even a medium small monkey can strike a blow that will reach through a coat, vest and two shirts, and he leaves a nasty wound. The most daring thing I ever did was to go into a monkey cage and take a baby from its mother. The ordinary house cat is the most stubborn animal under training, but the monk is the most dangerous if you work the larger kinds."—New York Sun.

Mildly Censuring Him.

"My goodness!" she says, with a pretty scowl. "I think a girl would feel dreadfully foolish if she proposed to a man."

"I should think so, too," replies the diffident youth.

"But then I suppose there are some girls who are just simply compelled to do the proposing," she sighs.

After an hour's consideration of that remark he realizes what she really means.—Woman's World.

Diplomacy.

Mrs. A.—That cook was awful, and I am glad she's gone. Mrs. B.—Did you discharge her? Mrs. A.—Oh, no; I wished to avoid a scene. What I did was flatter her so about her cooking that she thought she was underpaid and left.—Boston Transcript.

He Saw Them.

"Did you see any sharks when you crossed the ocean, Mr. Spifkins?" asked Miss Purling.

"Yes," replied Spifkins sadly; "I played cards with a couple."

The sting of a reproach is the truth of it.

WRITING A LETTER HOME

So Easy to do, Yet a Duty So Often Neglected.

A western editor wrote a piece the other day about a visiting aviator. He said the birdman had excused himself because he wanted to write a letter to his mother. He said he had been away from home for twelve years, and in all that time he had written home at least twice every week. Usually he sent a postcard daily between letters.

The editor who related the incident said that he used to be postmaster of his village. One day a girl married and went away, promising her father to write back as soon as she reached her new home. On the day the letter was due the father walked a long distance through the rain to the postoffice to get the letter. There was none, and in his disappointment and loneliness he broke down and cried. The postmaster wrote to the bride, reproaching her for her thoughtlessness. Promptly back came a letter for the father and one for the postmaster, thanking him for reminding her of her delinquency. Later she returned home to visit her parents, and took occasion to thank the postmaster in person, saying she had never forgotten the lesson he had taught her.

It is easy to send a letter to the absent mother or father; so easy to write "back home;" to send a card, if one be too busy for a more pretentious epistle.

Yet probably no fault is so general as the "failure to write." It is a rare person, indeed, who is not open to this criticism.—Battle Creek Enquirer.

A Gift With a Thought in it.

What other Christmas present costs so little and means so much as a subscription to The Youth's Companion—52 weeks for $1.75? It is a gift which benefits not only the one who receives it, but every member of the same household.

With many Christmas presents the sense of novelty wears off by the week's end, but The Youth's Companion is as new and sought after the fifty-second week of the year as the first. It is elastic in its adaptability, too; for it does not matter whether the present is for a boy or a girl, young married people, sedate mates, grandchildren—there never was one yet who did not set store by 'The Youth's Companion.' You cannot make a mistake if you get The Companion—and it is only $1.75 a year now. On January 1, 1912, the price will be advanced to $2.00

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and you, too, as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the Calendar.

ROOSEVELT AND 1912.

Pressed for a statement as to his attitude in regard to a possible nomination for President in 1912, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt several days ago authorized the following:

"Colonel Roosevelt finds it difficult to understand the comment that has followed upon his article in the Outlook regarding national laws and business interests. He had said exactly the same thing many times before. He cannot see why it should be assumed that this article indicates that he is ready to take any personal part in the coming campaign.

"It can be stated that Colonel Roosevelt has received many letters indicating the willingness of the writers to give him political support if such is desired. It can be stated that Colonel Roosevelt today received a letter from a certain United States senator offering the full political support of the senator in case Colonel Roosevelt would wish to be a candidate. To this letter Colonel Roosevelt has replied that he earnestly hopes that the senator will not only refrain from any action looking to the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt, but will also prevent his friends from taking any such step."

No comment would be made by Colonel Roosevelt upon this announcement, which he insisted should be made in the third person. Colonel Roosevelt would not name the senator to whom he referred.

Monday's city newspapers published the fact that United States Senator Murry Crane was the Senator who wrote to Roosevelt. Senator Crane, it was related, expressed the belief that Roosevelt could be elected in 1912 no matter whom the Democrats nominated for President.

Samuel G Blythe, a special writer in the "Saturday Evening Post," last week presented an article based on personal observation and inquiry in a tour embracing almost the entire United States. Mr. Blythe ventures the statement that Taft will be renominated but that he will be defeated unless the Democrats committed blunders beyond all hope of repair. Mr. Blythe declared that he had knowledge that Roosevelt would not be a candidate in 1912, but that he might be in 1916. In the same article Mr. Blythe predicts that the Democratic nominee for President will be either Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, or Governor Harmon, of Ohio, with the chances possibly favoring the former.

The Philadelphia "North American" on Monday published a special article, claimed to be based on a personal interview with Roosevelt, in which the positive statement was made that the latter would not accept a nomination in 1912. The positive statement was also made that Roosevelt was not pledged to Taft or any other candidate at the present time.

Philadelphia and Harrisburg despatches in the last few days state that Governor Wilson is not likely to have an instructed delegation for him from Pennsylvania. Several months ago the leaders of both the regular Democrats and Keystone Democrats in this State were publicly declaring their preference for Governor Wilson. This was taken as virtually assuring him an instructed delegation from Pennsylvania. The despatches of the last few days are to the effect that the situation has shifted and that in all probability the Keystone delegation will not be bound by instructions for any candidate.

COMMENDS ROOSEVELT.

If it be true, as semi-authoritatively published by a Philadelphia newspaper, that Col. Roosevelt "will not support any man for the nomination in 1912," that attitude is infinitely to his credit. This statement is coupled with another, not new, but still more important, that Col. Roosevelt is in no sense a candidate himself, that he deplores the continued use of his name in that connection, and that he wishes his friends to desist from their agitation and take him at his word.

Col. Roosevelt is the only living ex-president of the United States. He was elected president by the largest plurality ever given a nominee for that office. He received the largest total vote ever secured by a presidential candidate up to 1904. Mr. Taft in 1908 had almost 50,000 more votes, but he had less than half Roosevelt's plurality of 2,547,206. He was Col. Roosevelt's candidate, nominated through the retiring president's influence and elected by his help. It may be now that the colonel has cooled in his admiration for Mr. Taft, or it may be that he does not feel disposed to go as far as some of his insurgent supporters in anticipation of next June's convention, but if he is not inclined openly to stand by the President for renomination, then the proprieties require that he shall not declare for any other man.

With Col. Roosevelt's undoubted popularity among Republicans, if he were to participate in the preliminary campaign his capacity for increasing the complexities of the situation might work great harm. Such a course would be undignified in any event, for it is not seemly that one who occupies his unique position, and who has been honored as he has been by the American people, should undertake either to discipline the successor whom he selected or to nominate the Republican party in a manner which would be certain to create additional dissensions. In holding aloof from the controversy as to candidates Col. Roosevelt is displaying more astuteness than his superserviceable friends, and he will be in better shape to render invaluable assistance to his party after the convention. He is prudent in letting his wishes be known in ample time to avert misunderstandings, and his admonitions deserve to be accepted in good faith—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

The Useful Verb "To Get."

There is no word, long or short, in the English language capable of performing so much labor in a clear, intelligible sense as the verb to get. And here is an old time specimen of its capabilities:

"I got on horseback within ten minutes after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chaise for town, but I got wet through before I got to Canterbury, and I have got such a cold as I shall not be able to get rid of in a hurry. I got to the treasury about noon; but, first of all, I got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the board, but I could not get an answer then. However, I got intelligence from the messenger that I should most likely get one the next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn I got my supper. When I got up in the morning I got my breakfast and then got myself dressed that I might get out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it I got into the first chaise and got to Canterbury by 3 o'clock, and about tea time I got home."—Ave Maria.

Wellington's Subtle Retort.

Wednesday, 19th October, 1836—Lord Fitzgerald made us laugh at dinner today with a story about John Wilson Croker, whose pertinacity of opinion is well known. He was laying down the law after dinner to the Duke of Wellington and, according to custom, asserting the superiority of his own information on all subjects, having even flatly contradicted the duke, who had mentioned some incident that had taken place at the battle of Waterloo. At last the conversation turned upon the use of percussion caps for muskets of the army when Croker again maintained a directly opposite opinion to that which was urged by the duke, who at last good humoredly said to him, "My dear Croker, I can yield to your superior information on most points, and you may know a great deal more of what passed at Waterloo than myself, but as a sportsman I will maintain my point about percussion caps."—Thomas Raikes' Journal.

The Larch In Labrador.

The soil and atmosphere are so cold and dry in faraway Labrador that scarcely any vegetation thrives at all. The larch is a species of pine tree which is found in all northern countries, but its growth is so stunted in Labrador that a specimen found on the most southern part of that dreary land was but nine inches in height and the trunk was but three-eighths of an inch in diameter. A careful examination of the miniature tree revealed its age to be at least thirty-two years, for there were that number of ring growths shown in its small trunk. The very cold currents pouring down from the north and the fact that Labrador has less sunshine than Alaska, together with several inland climatic conditions, make the summer seasons shorter and colder than are those of Alaska.—Exchange.

The Smoky City.

A Pittsburg man once submitted a Pittsburg story to a New York magazine and got a wire from the editor:

"Will accept story if cut out libel."

So the Pittsburg man hurried over to New York and asked the editor whom he had libeled.

"You have libeled your native city, sir," was the reply. "Why," said the editor, turning over the manuscript, "don't you say here on page 23 that the heroine clutched the air desperately?"

"Yes. Go on."

"And then two paragraphs further down you say she washed her hands. Well, that"—

The editor frowned angrily at the author.

"That, sir, is a foul and disgusting libel on Pittsburg's air."—Detroit Free Press.

He Got the Limit.

"Do you believe there is anything prophetic in dreams?"

"Believe it! I know it. Only the other night I dreamed that I was at a church fair and awoke to find that my wife had been through my pockets and taken my last sou."—Exchange.

He Knew.

"It's the first $1,000 that's hard to get," explained the eminent millionaire.

"I know that," responded the mere man. "I've been trying to accumulate it for the past forty years."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Received a Sign

It Came With a Force That Nearly Killed Him

By ETHAN B. ARMOUR

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Adoniram Doyle was a strong believer in indications. As a child and young man he had never failed to see the new moon over his right shoulder without feeling sure that he would meet with some misfortune during the month. He would never start on a journey on Friday or sit at a table about which there were thirteen persons. These are but a few signs that he regarded, but they serve to show his character.

When eighteen years of age he had engaged himself to a young lady several years his senior. For an engagement ring he had given her one with an opal setting. He was not aware at the time that the opal invariably brings bad luck. The girl was equally ignorant. She had not been engaged a month when she was taken ill and died.

It was not remarkable that Adoniram, who was naturally inclined to make much of such matters, should have been deeply impressed with the fearful penalty he had paid for running counter to the opal blight. When he recovered from the shock of his fiancee's death he was not only disinclined to enter again upon an engagement without duly considering all the signs involved in the way of warning, but had reached a condition where he was looking for one to indicate that the lady of his choice was the right woman for him to marry.

Before he had passed middle age he had noted a number of indications that such or such a person would make him happy, but either the girl who seemed to be pointed out was too homely or had a bad temper or some other defect which led him to disregard the sign. With man's natural perversity he formed a purpose of marrying a young woman who had as much contempt for these petty superstitions as he had respect. Miss Octavia Sparks had a mind superior to that of Mr. Doyle, but she liked him. Women are supposed to confine their love and admiration to men who are above them in intellectual strength, but this is not an invariable rule. Mr. Doyle was a gentle, simple minded man, free of guile, and he appealed to Miss Sparks' stronger intellect. Perhaps it was a considerable muscular strength he possessed of which he was himself unconscious that impressed her weaker physical organization.

Be this as it may, the two were drawn together, and it only needed some indication that fate intended their meeting to induce Mr. Doyle to propose. He waited a long while for such an augury; but, none appearing, he made up his mind to propose, anyway. He started out one crisp autumnal evening, but no sooner had he opened his door than there, up in the southwest, was a crescent. He paused. His first glimpse of the new moon was over his left shoulder.

He went back into the house, took off his hat and overcoat and sat down disappointed. He was not sure that the incident portended a refusal on the part of Miss Sparks or that a marriage with her would result disastrously. Nevertheless he dare not, in the face of so marked a warning, persist in his intention of asking her to be his wife.

But he continued his friendly relations with her and longed to settle down with her in the bonds of matrimony. He lived alone in his home with an old woman who was both cook and housekeeper, and there was no reason why he should not bring Miss Sparks into the house as his wife. Should he do so he felt confident that she would make it a very different home for him, rendering what was desolate, cheerful. But of this he was not certain. How did he know that she might not turn out to be a virago?

However, a constant companionship gave him confidence in her, and the following summer he came again to a resolution to propose marriage to her. This time, in passing between his house and hers, a snake crossed the road directly before him.

He stopped short and watched the viper slowly dragging itself along in the dust, to lose itself in the long grass and make a final momentary appearance as it crawled under a fence. He stood for a few minutes thinking, then turned reluctantly and went back to his home. This second warning was so pronounced that he resolved never again to set out with an intention to propose to Miss Sparks.

From this time he began to consider the different unmarried women in the place other than the one on whom he had set his heart, with a view to acquiring a helpmeet. A widow, Mrs. Perkins, lived some distance down the road, and Mr. Doyle, after much deliberation, followed by a number of attentions, resolved to substitute her for Miss Sparks. He would have liked to receive some indication that the fates would look favorably upon the match, but had come to the conclusion that the only signs he would receive would be negative. Twice he had been warned against Miss Sparks. If it was not intended that he should marry Mrs. Perkins perhaps it would be indicated to him.

It was a winter day that he came to the conclusion to ask the widow to be his wife. Before supper he put on his Sunday suit, brushed his hair, combed his whiskers and after the meal made his third start in quest of matrimony. He had reached the widow's door when his heart failed him. Not being able to nerve himself for the ordeal—or was it regret for Octavia?—he hesitated. Then suddenly he remembered that in the unsettled state of his mind he had forgotten to feed his stock. He determined to return, take care of the animals for the night, march resolutely up to the widow's door, knock, enter and make his proposition. This is the usual course with resolutions. It is much easier to be resolute with one in the future than one present.

Mr. Doyle returned to his barn, put the horses' beds into the stalls, a measure of oats into each of their troughs, then went up into the loft to throw down the hay. Whether it was his perturbed condition of mind concerning his proposal and the probably consequent separating himself for all time from Octavia Sparks, the fact remains that he stepped into an opening in the floor of the loft of which he had many years been aware and landed in a stall below. He not only received an internal injury from the fall, but the horse occupying the place, frightened at his master's sudden entrance, came near trampling the life out of him before he could drag himself out of reach. Then he fainted.

After lying unconscious for a few moments he came to himself, feeling a terrible pain in his chest, and found it difficult to breathe. He was able to arise and stagger to the house, where he fainted again. A doctor was called, who felt of his chest and found a rib broken. As soon as possible a surgeon was produced who said that the rib was so badly fractured that it could not be set. If left as it was it would destroy the lung on which it pressed. In fact, it must be removed. Instead of having the patient taken to a hospital, he decided to perform the operation at the house.

Octavia Sparks was on her way to the village store when Mrs. Butterworth came along and said:

"La' sakes, Octavy, have y' hearn what's happened to Mr. Doyle?"

"No. What is it?" cried Octavia, paling.

"He fell through the barn floor and broke a rib. The surgeon's goin' to take it out of him."

The girl made no reply to this, but turned and hurried home. There she learned that the surgeon was about to perform the operation. Going over to Doyle's house, she asked if she might be of service. The surgeon told her that he had not yet been able to secure a nurse and would be glad to have her serve in that capacity. While he and his assistant were making their preparations she went to Doyle's bedside and pressed his hand sympathetically.

"I've had a sign," he said.

"What kind of a sign?"

"A negative sign. I was about to propose marriage to the Widow Perkins when I got the fall. It is not intended that she be my helpmeet."

The medical men returned, put the patient on an improvised operating table, administered an anaesthetic and removed the broken rib. Doyle was then placed on his bed and his return to consciousness awaited by the others. Presently a low moan announced its coming; then another and another. When he opened his eyes there was Octavia kneeling beside him, his hand clasped by hers.

"Occie," he groaned, "I wonder if Adam passed through what I have when the rib was removed from which Eve was made."

Then suddenly a light came into his eye, and he spoke again.

"You've always despised signs. I don't know about the others I've received, but those given me this evening are mighty powerful. I went to propose to Widow Perkins and was turned back by remembering that I hadn't fed the stock. The result was this fall and being nigh tramped to death by a horse. If that isn't a sure sign that I wasn't to marry her I don't know anything about signs. And now that the surgeon has taken a rib out o' me you pop up before me as Eve appeared to Adam after he awakened from the deep sleep in which the job was done. I reckon I know what that means."

"What does it mean, Ad?"

"That if you don't marry me we'll both of us be flying in the face of providence."

At that moment the surgeon advanced and forbade the patient to excite himself. Octavia withdrew while the medical man looked over the patient. He found Mr. Doyle under the influence of an excitement that boded no good. He directed that no one be permitted to converse with him until sufficient time had passed to enable him to recuperate. But this did not satisfy Mr. Doyle. He conceived that his fall from the haymow, the removal of the rib and at his awakening his finding Octavia beside him meant that she was the woman he was to marry.

"Doctor," he said, "I wish a clergyman."

"What for? You're not going to die."

"I'm going to be married."

"Married! In this condition?"

"Yes. As a rib was removed from our common father Adam, of which Eve was made, so"—

"You keep quiet," said the doctor, "or I'll not answer for the consequences."

"And I say I wish you to call in a clergyman. If you don't do it I'll get up and call one myself. My Eve is here, and it is my duty to marry her."

The surgeon looked troubled. He believed the man was delirious and thought it better to humor him. Calling Octavia aside, he said:

"You'd better pretend to go through a ceremony. It needn't mean anything."

"As you advise, doctor."

Tennyson's Rhymes.

As an example of faulty rhyming the great Alfred Tennyson is being held up by an English critic as in the very forefront of offenders. He is shown to have taken license as a great poet that would have damned any small rhymer. The critic gives as examples of Tennyson's imperfect rhymes "river" and "ever," "given" and "heaven," which are considered too conventional to be criticised. He then passes on to the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade," where Tennyson, with the inaccurate ear of the thorough Briton, rhymes "onward" and "hundred," "said" and "dismayed," "hundred" and "thundered," "hundred" and "blundered," "hundred" and "wondered," all in that one short poem. One may look in vain through the works of Longfellow, Bryant, Lowell or any American poet of the first rank for such orthoepical blundering, which passes without question among Britons.

"What is the force that makes the world move?" asked the teacher.

"The landlord," replied Johnny Hardluppe promptly.—Philadelphia Record.

Mt. Eagle.

Well, pretty nearly everybody about here is through butchering.

Foster Beatty, of Kennedy, was a visitor to Bellefonte on Saturday.

Irvin Robison, Jr., was a shopping visitor to Bellefonte on Saturday.

Miss Ida Daughenbaugh, of Howard, on Sunday visited with Miss Yarnell.

Miss Carrie Shank, who is employed in Bellefonte, was home to help her parents butcher.

E. H. Leathers and Will Bitner returned from their hunting trip with the report that deer are rather scarce.

Wilbur Bitner and Clark Beatty departed on Monday for Avis, where they expect to find jobs for the winter.

Mrs. Christ Heverly, of Marsh Creek, is now making her home with the E. E. Heverly family at Mount Eagle.

Mrs. Kessinger, of Pitcairn, and Mrs. Decker, of Bellefonte, spent Sunday very pleasantly at the Irvin Yarnell home.

Theodore Bathurst, of Avis, called on old friends here on Friday. He is now paying a visit to his father-in-law Mr. Smoyer, at Milesburg.

Miss Margaret Mason, who is employed in Bellefonte, last week spent several days with her mother on the farm, returning to the County Capitol on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Aikey, of Bellwood, came down on Friday to help the former's aunt, Miss Ella Leathers, butcher on Saturday. They returned home on Sunday.

Mr. Yarnell expects to leave the George Leathers farm and move his family to the Anna Long house, near Howard. Al Robison will take the place after Mr. Yarnell leaves.

Mrs. Cora Leathers Bartruff went to Bellefonte on Saturday, where she met Mr. Bartruff and accompained him to this place. Mr. Bartruff will probably remain here for some time.

Mrs. Lutz and her daughter, from Williamsport, who have been visiting with the former's sister, Mrs. Theodore G. Leathers, went to Curtin on Saturday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Bryan.

Howard.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cook were visitors to State College on Saturday.

W. H. Long, the miller, is home after a business trip of one week among eastern points.

Whooping cough is prevalent in town, one family having three children afflicted with it.

Mr. and Mrs. Marius Minor have an extra large turkey with which they will entertain a number of friends at Thanksgiving dinner.

D. A. Allison, Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Reber and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowes attended the funeral of Mrs. D. A. McKibben, at Ceadar Springs on Saturday.

Mrs. Emma Decker and daughter, Laura, went to Williamsport on Wednesday to enjoy a visit over Thanksgiving with Roy, who is a teacher in the Lumber City schools.

Mrs. A. A. Pletcher recently visited with her father, Mr. Hayes, at Clintondale, and while there helped with the annual butchering. One of the porkers weighed 514 pounds. Wouldn't Al. have enjoyed being there.

Union services were held in some of the churches on Sunday, last. Rev. R. S. Taylor, of the Methodist church, preached in the Evangelical church at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at 7.30 Rev. Faust of the Reformed church, preached in the Christian chapel.

Mrs. George A. Jacobs a day or two ago had a most unusual experience, and incidentally one that testifies to the honesty and sterling worth of Howard's young men. She lost her pocketbook and a short time afterward it was found by Chestor Lucas. The pocketbook contained $23, and it was a pleasure to Chester to return it to the rightful owner.

Professor Walter Muffly, a State College graduate, now located in Lawrence County, is enjoying a visit home this week and while here has been trying his hand at hunting. Thus far the genial Professor has not had much luck. When he returned from the woods a day or two ago some of his friends asked what he got. The Professor smiled and replied that he got tired.

Several years ago a number of business men purchased from J. DeLong, some land a few miles west of Howard, and organized what was known as the Centre Brick Co. Recently they sold the land to a party from Williamsport. The original company elected Walter Cook, president; W. M. Long, secretary, and A. A. Shank, treasurer. Active operations were never begun on the site. It is to be hoped that the new owner will decide to do something with the operation.

An adjourned meeting of the Huntingdon Presbytery will be held at Tyrone on Monday morning of next week, at 11 o'clock. The business to be taken up will include consideration of calls extended several ministers and the resignation of one minister.

You don't want to miss the ladies' Thanksgiving social in the I. O. O. F. Hall.

Misses Cora and Vida Corl were welcome visitors at the McFry home last Friday.

John W. Fry and wife spent Saturday in Bellefonte sizing up the latest winter fashions.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Zimmerman, of Peru, spent last week at the J. B. Whitmer home, at White Hall.

It is rumored that last week G. D. Meek sold his Bunker Hill farm to James and Luther Peters.

Mrs. Harry Gates, of York State, is visiting relatives and friends in this section, the home of her childhood.

Albert Musser, of Clearfield, came over last week to spend a day with his mother, whose health is badly shattered.

Butchering season is well on and this week will see most of the porkers in the salt barrel. The high price of corn is causing short feeding.

Report says that our dentist, Dr. R. M. Krebs, is arranging to leave town and that he will hang his dental shingle to the breezes in Tyrone.

We are sorry to announce the illness of Miss Maude Hoy, who is suffering from blood poisoning and whose condition is regarded as critical.

We are very glad to report the improvement in the condition of Clayton Struble, following his recent disaster in a runaway, although he is still in bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Burwell, of Tyrone, have been visiting friends in and about town the past week, returning home on Friday delighted with their trip.

Last Thursday Harry Hoy and wife flitted from the Homan farm at Oak Hall to the Newton Hoy home at Pine Hall, where they have taken rooms for the winter.

On Saturday morning, while preparing to butcher, Ira L. Burwell had a sharp snag penetrate his left eye, causing a painful wound that is keeping him indoors nowadays.

The Kepler crew came out of the mountains on Saturday with one deer. The party saw quite a number, but not of the right sex. The fleet foot crew in camp over at the Kettle have one to their credit.

Homer and Ed. Decker came up from Bellefonte to help make the big porkers squeal on Saturday at the Decker homestead. Thus far Jim is the champion. One of his porkers tipped the beam at the 405 mark.

Last Thursday our efficient mail carrier on the R. F. D. route gave up his job for the day to go down to Grandpa Lutz's to help butcher, to say nothing of helping get away with the splendid dinner served by Grandma Lutz.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Cal. Sunday attended the T. J. Mays funeral at Lamar on Sunday morning. The deceased was a member of Co. E, 45th Regiment, Penna. Vols., and served with distinction. He was wounded in the head during one of the battles in which he participated.

Last Saturday evening Tussey Council, No. 515, O. of I. A., celebrated their seventeenth anniversary in their hall. Rev. S. J. Pittinger was the principal speaker, and being an ex-member knew whereof he spoke; his remarks were in glowing terms of loyalty and patriotism. The occasion was made a happy social event, the members with their wives or best girls filling the hall. The ladies furnished big cakes and ice cream. Professor J. Homer Decker presided at the organ, rendering some choice selections. At the wind-up a "smoker" was held, the evening being brought to a close with all singing "America."

Blanchard.

Rev. W. H. Patterson is conducting protracted meeting at Romola, expecting to continue it as long as the interest warrants. He will later conduct protracted meeting in Blanchard.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Disciple church this (Thursday) evening at 7.30 o'clock, to be conducted by Rev. W. H. Patterson. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. R. S. Taylor, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. All are cordially invited.

More than usual interest attaches to the next term of court at Bellefonte, which convenes on Monday, December 4, for the much-discussed cases of the receivers of the Washington National Building and Loan Association against a number of our residents will be up for trial at that time. The several defendants are Andrew S. Bowes and others, Michael H. Davidson and others, James Eagan heirs, two cases, and Susan E. Snyder. As has been explained on several occasions, the defendants several years ago were persuaded to accept loans on their properties for improving the same. Now the cases are to be tried in the courts.

Miss Alice Patterson on Saturday evening entertained the T. S. G. club, of Blanchard, the evening being spent with games and music. Delicious refreshments were served. Those who were present included: Misses Blossom Heverly, Tootsie Bechdel, Tippie Wagner, Murphy Page, Fred Figit Sulenberger, Giggles Crider, Dottie Bolapue, Taffy Davy, Lollie Gardner, Pattie Patterson, of Blanchard and vicinity, and Miss Velma Gunsallus, of Mill Hall; Messrs. Harold Schenck, Dean Goodwin, Floyd Bechdel, Casper Sents, Herbert Crider, George Miller, Roy Miller, Victor Ridge, Forest Gardner and Garland Patterson.

A farmers' institute will be held in the Disciple church on Monday and Tuesday, December 4 and 5, at which one of the principal speakers will be Professor R. P. Bliss, assistant secretary of the Penna. Free Distributing Library Commission. Five sessions will be held, all of which will be free. The public cordially invited. The program to be rendered follows:

MODERN METHODS IN FARM WORK

Valuable Service of Pennsylvania's Agricultural Department.

MODEL ORCHARD MOVEMENT

Prosecution For Manufacturers of Bogus Fertilizers — Instruction at Movable School and Institute.

Pennsylvania has taken the front rank of states which have adopted scientific methods for the advancement of agriculture and horticulture. The work of the Keystone State's Department of Agriculture has been of incalculable value to the farming interests. Since the creation of the department the legislature has appropriated more than $2,000,000 for that branch of the state government. Each year its work has been extended and the appropriation to maintain it increased. Owing to its success its methods are being adopted by agricultural and horticultural bodies throughout the country.

A phase of the department's work that has attracted widespread attention is presented by what is known as the "Model Orchard Movement." The movement had its origin three years ago in the selection of thirty orchards which were taken under the department's charge. This number has grown to such an extent that now more than 1300 orchards are on the "model" list. The owners of these orchards depend upon the department for direction and assistance in their efforts to grow fine fruit, under the terms of a signed contract, executed when application was made for the service. More than 1918 public orchard demonstrations, embracing work in spraying trees and other horticultural operations, have been conducted since Jan. 1 last, and about 1200 model orchard inspections made. The attendance at the demonstrations was many thousands of fruit growers.

Ridding Orchards of Deadly Pests.

In the inspection of orchards the inspector determines the kinds of insects injuriously infesting the trees on each of the premises inspected, as well as the degree of infestation. A report is made of conditions for the department and a duplicate left for the use of the owner and tenant. Of the orchard inspections, 4584 have been made in thirty counties during this year. Inspections of nurseries to the number of 219 have also been made and 330 boxes of foreign importations of nursery and greenhouse stock inspected.

Original investigations have been carried on in the effects of certain insecticides on oyster-shell scale, lecanium scale and the grape-vine flea beetle, in which 300 trees and vines have been sprayed. Special investigations have been conducted as to the distribution, habits and life history of the Hessian fly and the appearance in Pennsylvania of the seventeen-year Cicada.

The Bureau of Farmers' Institutes may be regarded as the right arm of the State Agricultural Department. Through this bureau the college is brought to the farmer and results of experiments carried on in all the states for the advancement of agriculture are brought to his attention by scientific men, while instruction in methods is given by practical tillers of the soil who have proved their ability to instruct by the success they have achieved in the employment of the methods they advocate.

Institute Work In Every County.

Since the beginning of the year 221 regular farmers' institutes have been held, all the counties of the state being included in this work. These institutes were under the direction of local managers appointed by the Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, who is ex-officio Director of Institutes and who attended many of the meetings. Instruction was given by experts in the science of agriculture, as well as men known to be thoroughly practical farmers who are successful in the conduct of their affairs.

In addition to the regular institute work there were held since Jan. 1 fifteen movable schools of agriculture. These schools continue in session about one week at a given point and then go to another point. Before a school is located at any point there must be an enrollment of a sufficient number of persons who pledge themselves to attend regularly the sessions to insure such an attendance as will justify locating the school at that point. At these schools instruction is given in specific branches of agriculture according to the selection made by the persons who enroll themselves as students. The attendance at the institutes since Jan. 1 was 162,809, and at the movable schools 16,198. The Bureau of Farmers' Institutes also furnished speakers for thirty-two special summer meetings conducted in the interest of agriculture, at which 32,376 persons were present, and speakers for many agricultural fairs and expert judges of certain commodities when requests for such judges were made.

Regulating Manufacture of Fertilizers.

The enforcement of the provisions of the law regulating the manufacture and sale of commercial fertilizers has been of inestimable value to the farmers of Pennsylvania. The amount expended by farmers of this state for fertilizers is from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 annually, and while most fertilizer manufacturers are honest men, some are not.

An act of the legislature prohibits the use in the manufacture of commercial fertilizers of certain materials such as hoof, horn, wool-waste, etc., that contain nitrogen in a form that is not readily available when applied to the land, without an explicit statement of the fact; said statement to be conspicuously affixed to every package of such fertilizer or manure, and to accompany and go with every lot, parcel or package of the same. This single item of legislation is worth many thousands of dollars to the farmers.

The spring sampling of fertilizers this year resulted in the securing of 1974 samples, of which 719 were analyzed. As a result of the analytical work fifteen prosecutions were ordered for violation of the fertilizer law. These cases are now pending. The sampling work for the fall season resulted in the securing of 1292 samples, which are now undergoing analysis by the chemist employed for this work. The number of brands of fertilizer registered since Jan. 1 is 1537, and the amount of license fees collected from manufacturers of fertilizers since that date is $26,415, which has been paid into the State treasury.

Swimming Ghosts.

Lecturing before the Camera club, Dr. Francis Ward said that in an attempt to photograph fish in their natural surroundings he had constructed a pond with an observation chamber let in at the side below the surface of the water. Through the window of this chamber unseen by the fish he could watch and photograph their movements. He discovered by this means that the protection of fish when in their natural state is much more thorough than is generally supposed. All silvery fish were in reality merely mirrors in the water, reflecting the tone and color of their surroundings so as to appear to their fellow fish gray, unsubstantial, swimming ghosts, hardly to be distinguished at all. It was only when the dace, for example, rose to the surface, causing its body to reflect light, that the pike at the bottom of the pond could see and go for its little victim.—London Graphic.

England's Cream Ponies.

The famous cream ponies which are used to draw the king's carriage on state occasions are the sole survivors of a breed of horses which has otherwise passed out of existence. They are the direct and only pure bred descendants of the famous horses of Hanover, which George I. brought with him to his new English kingdom two centuries ago. The once famous white horses and black horses of Hanover have died out, and now the creams alone survive, and only in England, for when Queen Victoria sent to Hanover about 1800 to procure fresh stock for the royal stud not one was to be found.—London Answers.

Reputation.

Reputation is one of the prizes for which men contend. It is, as Mr. Burke calls it, "the cheap defense and ornament of nations and the nurse of manly exertions." It produces more labor and more talent than twice the wealth of a country could ever rear up. It is the coin of genius, and it is the imperious duty of every man to bestow it with the most scrupulous justice and the wisest economy.—Sydney Smith.

A New Interpretation.

History Teacher—What conspicuous feature figured in Harrison's campaign? Pupil—In the long procession they had a log cabin with a colored man tied on top. History Teacher—A what? Pupil—Well, my history says there was a live coon fastened on the roof.—Lippincott's.

Good Suggestion.

"Sometimes," said Uncle Eben, "a man kin build up a mo' valuable credit by keepin his promises dan he kin by holdin' on to his money."—Washington Star.

It is not our wrong actions which it requires courage to confess so much as those that are ridiculous and foolish.—Rousseau.

No, Indeed.

Just because a man wants but little here below is no sign that he has anything coming to him on high.—Galveston News.

Stork's Twenty-second Visit.

There is rejoicing in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Davis, of Carbondale, for the stork last week paid another visit to their home, and although the old bird had made 21 previous visits, he was welcomed and his burden, a son, was greeted as kindly as it would have been if it were the first born. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are natives of Wales, but have lived in this country all of their married life. Of the 22 children born to them only 12 are still living. The father of the family is almost totally blind and lost both arms at the elbow as the result of a mine accident at Vandling a few years ago.

Special Sale.

WASHING THE DISHES.

Suggestions to His Brothers by the Club Woman's Husband.

Tonight I want to offer my brother husbandettes a valuable hint about dishwashing.

When you do the dishes don't set the dispan in the bottom of the sink, as most men do. Sinks may be the right height for women, but they are too low for men.

For months I suffered from crick in the back, aching shoulders, stiff neck and abdominal cramps. I consulted our family physician without obtaining relief.

At last, quite by accident, I lit on the cause of my trouble. A pile of skillets and saucepans had been left in the sink, and I put the dishpan on them. Then I was not obliged to bend over so far as usual, and that day I had hardly any lumbago pains at all.

Since then I have rested the dishpan on a couple of bricks placed in the bottom of the sink, and I wash the dishes standing almost erect. The roses are coming back into my cheeks, and our whole home is brighter as a result of my lucky discovery.

I am sure that my men readers will be saved many miserable hours if they will follow my suggestion. The bricks may be used between times as door stoppers, foot warmers or nutcrackers.

Tomorrow evening I will tell you what I know about washing granite ware.—Newark News.

DEEPEST SLEEP.

It Always Occurs During the First Hour of Slumber.

"Yes," said the doctor, "sleep is a very puzzling mystery. Nobody knows what the cause of it is, but we do know that it is always accompanied by anaemia of the brain. In other words, when you sleep the blood drains away from the head to the limbs. If you fell asleep on a balanced bed, the moment you dropped off the foot of the bed would begin to sink, and the deeper the sleep the greater the slant.

"That is why a hot bath tends to sleepiness. It brings the blood to the skin and so lessens the supply in the brain. Curiously enough, great cold has the same effect and for the same reason. You know how cold swells and reddens the hands.

"Recent experiments have shown conclusively how pale and bloodless the brain grows in sleep. How? Well, a piece of bone has been removed from the skull of a puppy and a watchglass inserted instead. The moment the puppy under observation wakes its brain at once grows pink again. No; the puppy doesn't seem to mind it.

"Experiments made by dropping heavy balls have shown that sleep is always at its deepest in the first hour. After that unconsciousness gets shallower and shallower."—London Answers.

Maul Rock.

Among the numerous natural curiosities of West Virginia is one in Lincoln county called the "Maul rock" because of its similarity to a maul. The base of the rock is about a thousand feet above sea level and is made up of large bowlders, says an exchange. The stem of the rock is twenty feet high and will average about seven feet in diameter. The cap, or maul part, is about six feet thick and is thirty-eight feet in circumference. The stem is of a soft formation and is fast crumbling away since the timber has died that was a great protection from the force of strong winds. By mounting the rock by means of a ladder that is kept there a magnificent view of the West Virginia hills can be obtained.—Christian Science Monitor.

Love Letters of a Husband.

"Dear Jane—Arrived here with morning O.K. It's a poor looking town, but business is good. I'll write more next time.—Your loving husband, John." "Dear Jane—Got here last night. Train was three hours late. No news, but business is good. Longer letter next time.—Yours as ever, John." "Dear Jane—Sorry to hear you weren't feeling well. Hope you are better by now. Getting a good many orders here. No news, but more next time.—Lovingly, John." "Dear Jane—Just to let you know I'm all right, though the rheumatism has been bothering me again. Got here this morning and have done a lot of business already. Nothing to write, but I'll do better next time.—With love John."—London Mail.

An Artist's Trials.

Brownly—Dauber certainly has his own troubles.

Pinder—Why, I thought he was doing splendidly.

Brownly—He was until he painted that last landscape. He painted the sun in too natural.

Pinder—How could that be?

Brownly—Well, it dries up the water in the pond so fast that he has to paint in new water every two or three days.—New York Times.

In Plain Words.

Father (to his daughter, whom he sees whispering to her mother)—Elsie, how often have I told you not to do that? Speak out if you want anything. Elsie—Well, father, I wanted to know why the woman near me has such a red nose.—Fliegende Blatter.

Small In a Double Sense.

"After all," remarked Smithers, yawning, "it is a small world."

"It has to be," snapped Smithers, "to match some of the people in it."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Always Breathe Through the Nose.

The nose is a better filtering plant than man has yet been able to invent. It not only filters the air before sending it to the lungs but it also warms and moistens it. Blow your nose while you are on a train or walking along a dusty road. The black that you will find on your handkerchief represents the dirt that your nose is constantly preventing from reaching your lungs.

Pure air is just as necessary to the lungs as pure water is to the stomach, says Karl de Schweinitz, Executive Secretary, Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. Therefore, breat he only through the nose. Mouth breathing is harmless because it does not warm, filter or moisten the air sufficiently. When you breathe through the mouth you short-circuit the nose by stopping the openings that connect it with the bronchial tubes and lungs.

If you find trouble in breathing through the nose, something is sure to be wrong. You may have adenoids or some other obstructing growth at the back of the nose. Go to the doctor immediately and have the trouble adjusted. Mouth breathing is a bad habit. Let nothing keep you from breathing through the nose.

Walnut Timber For Germany.

C. K. Comly, of Steubenville, Ohio, loaded a car of very fine walnut logs which were cut on Thomas Coleman's farm in Sinking Valley. This shipment of walnut logs will be sent to New York, thence to Germany where it will be used in manufacturing purposes. The above cut is the last of the good walnut timber in the valley. The largest tree brought down will cut 1200 feet of useful material. Tyrone Herald.

PLANNING WORK FOR MODEL ROADS

Pennsylvania to Lead in Highway Construction.

CONTRACTS UNDER NEW LAW

Modern System of Improving Thoroughfares — Purpose of Proposed Bond Issue—Support of Tener Administration.

The State Highway Department is planning for Pennsylvania the best system of improved roads in this country. An official of that department predicted recently that when the work it has projected shall have been completed the roads of the Keystone State would be unsurpassed by the famous highways of France, Germany and other European countries. Model roads for Pennsylvania has been made possible by the enactment by the legislature at its recent session of the measure popularly known as the "Sproul road bill." This legislation received the earnest support of Governor John K. Tener, who during the campaign of last year in public addresses repeatedly emphasized the fact that he was an enthusiastic good roads advocate and that the influence of his administration would be exerted for the advancement of the good roads movement. Since its inception the good roads movement in this state has been under Republican legislation.

The State Highway Department was established during the administration of Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker, and the act under which it was organized is the most liberal of all highway acts where the state assists in paying a portion of the cost of reconstructing roads. Under this law $9,500,000 was appropriated and expended for reconstruction work from June 1, 1903, to May 31, 1911. During that period 850 miles of road were reconstructed. Ten per cent. of the amount appropriated was set aside as a maintenance fund and apportioned to the several townships and counties according to the number of miles of improved roads therein, which had been maintained to conform to the state's standard. Under this law the state paid seventy-five per cent. of the cost of reconstruction; the township and county each paying one-eighth of the total cost of improvement. The maintenance of these roads after construction was placed in the hands of the township supervisors.

Improvements Under Sproul Law.

The great demand for a system of connected improved highways and for a system of maintenance of the roads already reconstructed and of those reconstructed and improved in the future had its consummation in the enactment of the Sproul bill. This act reorganized the State Highway Department. It provides for two systems of road work. The first designated as "State Highways," is comprised of about 8000 miles of public roads and turnpikes as described in 296 routes. These roads are the principal main thoroughfares or highways, forming and being main travelled roads or routes between the county seats of the several counties of the commonwealth, and to the state line and between principal cities, boroughs and towns. They will be marked, built or rebuilt, repaired and maintained by and at the sole expense of the state and they will be under the exclusive authority and jurisdiction of the State Highway Department. Surveys of each route must be made and a map showing all details must be prepared. The several routes shall be taken over by the department on or before June 1, 1912, except that portion of a route which traverses a turnpike road upon which tolls are collected.

The taking over of the toll roads will be deferred until the money from the proposed bond issue becomes available. The bonds cannot be issued until the resolution amending section four of article nine of the state constitution is adopted at the next session of the legislature and afterwards approved by the people. Section four after amendment will read as follows: "No debt shall be created by or on behalf of the state, except to supply casual deficiencies of revenue, repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state in war, or to pay existing debt; and the debt created to supply deficiencies in revenue shall never exceed in the aggregate at any one time, one million of dollars; provided, however that the General Assembly, irrespective of any debt, may authorize the state to issue bonds to the amount of fifty millions of dollars for the purposes of improving and rebuilding the highways of the commonwealth."

Three Millions Available.

The work of maintenance, repair and construction of state highways will be carried on as equally and uniformly in the several counties as conditions will permit. All contracts for the construction of state highways must be let to the lowest responsible bidders, with the option on the part of the State Highway Commissioner to reject any or all bids. Contracts must be made in the name of the commonwealth, must be approved by the Governor and must be approved, as to form and legality by the Attorney General or Deputy Attorney General.

The Sproul law appropriates three million dollars to establyish and carry on the work of the department and for the purpose of maintenance, repairing and construction of state highways and for the payment of the state's share of the maintenance and repairs of state aid highways.

Under the new law the State Highway Department has made five contracts, aggregating about $500,000. Of these two are for the reconstruction of the Narrows Road in Juniata and Mifflin Counties, between Mifflintown and Lewistown. The other contracts are for work on the National Pike in Fayette and Somerset Counties.

State aid highways are provided for in the Sproul law in a manner similar to that provided for under the former law. Applications for state aid in the reconstruction of township roads can be made by the supervisors of a township to the county commissioners, and the county commissioners must then make application to the State Highway Department asking the state to join in the reconstruction of the roads. In this case the township and county each pay 25 per cent. of the total cost of the work, the state paying 50 per cent. The board of township supervisors or county commissioners, without the intervention of the other, may make application direct to the State Highway epartment asking for state aid in the reconstruction of township roads, and in doing so said township or county agrees to pay 50 per cent. of the cost of such improvement, the state paying the balance of the cost.

Applications For State Aid.

A county reconstructing township roads under the act of June 26, 1905, known as the "Flinn law," may make application to the Department asking for state aid in the reconstruction of said roads, agreeing to pay one-half of the total cost, the state paying the balance. The state hereafter will maintain all roads reconstructed as state aid roads and charge one-half of the cost of such maintenance to the respective township or county in which the road is located. Twenty-nine applications, asking for state aid under the law calling for the reconstruction of sixty-four miles, have been received at the State Highway Department. Several sections of road are ready to be put under contract as state aid roads. The Department is authorized to make a contract for the amount of the share to be paid by the state, plus the respective shares of the townships and counties. The appropriation to carry out the provisions of this section of the act is $1,000,000, which, added to the township and county shares, gives $2,000,000 for state aid work for the two years ending May 31, 1913.

The act of May 15, 1909, is repealed and superseded by the Jones act, approved June 14, 1911, which provides for the election of township supervisors and gives the State Highway Department an oversight of the $6,000 miles of earth roads in the state by providing for the board of supervisors of a township making an annual report under oath to the Department on or before January 1 in each and every year. It also provides "that all money appropriated under the provisions of the act shall be expended by the supervisors of the respective townships for the making of permanent improvements on the township's roads, according to plans and specifications furnished by the State Highway Department and under the supervision of the State Highway Department, such supervision to be without cost to the township," and giving the State Highway Commissioner the right to withhold from a township, neglecting or refusing to expend the money as directed, the amount to which it would otherwise be entitled.

Revenue From Motor Licenses.

The Sproul act also provides for the furnishing by the State Highway Commissioner of bulletins of instructions to each board of township supervisors and that official is also to furnish free of charge standards, plans and specifications for permanent improvements in the building of culverts, establishing of grades, proper drainage, and such other matters as he may deem essential. It abolishes the work tax in all townships in the state and provides for a bonus of 50 per cent. of the total amount of road taxes collected to be paid by the state, not to exceed more than twenty dollars foreach mile of township road in said township. The board of supervisors of a township is to consist of three members, who shall be elected as follows: The term of all supervisors elected in 1908 shall expire the first Monday of December, 1911. The term of all supervisors elected in 1909 and 1910 shall expire the first Monday of December, 1913. The supervisors will meet on the first Monday in December, 1911, and yearly thereafter. Many townships have asked the Department to furnish information and plans for small bridges and culverts and to establish grades for the cutting down of hills and the improvement of the roads.

In addition to appropriations by the legislature the State Highway Department receives a large revenue from motor vehicle licenses. From January 1 to October 1 of this year the revenue from this source was $418,631. During that period about 10,000 more licenses were issued than during the entire year of 1910. The total issue on October 1 was: Registrations, 43,074; drivers, 15,483; dealers, 3960; motor cycles, 4727, and special, 849.

FIGHTING DISEASE ON THE FARM

Scientific Methods of State Board in Protecting Live Stock Investments.

PLANS SAVING OF MILLIONS

Vigorous Campaign Against Bovine Tuberculosis—Value of Laboratory Work to Stockmen and Veterinarians.

A state board at Harrisburg proposes to save the farmers of Pennsylvania five million dollars a year. It is estimated that the farmers of this state annually lose live stock worth that amount of money by diseases which can be prevented. The State Live Stock Sanitary Board has rendered valuable service to the Pennsylvania farmer since its organization fourteen years ago, but its work appears to have only begun. The last census shows that there are 206,975 farms in Pennsylvania, and that the value of the live stock on these farms is $133,219,000. The plans of the state board to protect this investment from preventable losses from disease are being closely followed, not only by live stock raisers and breeders of the United States, but by those abroad.

Pennsylvania was the first state to organize and properly equip a laboratory where diseases of animals could be studied and recognized. It has proven of inestimable value to stockmen and veterinarians. It is located at the veterinary school in Philadelphia, where all possible facilities are employed to study the mysterious diseases of animals. The laboratory is under the direction of Dr. Karl F. Meyer, who was trained in the best schools of continental Europe. Dr. Meyer also has charge of experimental work on the state farm, which is located in Delaware County. He, with his staff of qualified assistants, are engaged in studying the diseases of domestic animals in Pennsylvania. At the same time they are engaged in the preparation of many test fluids, such as tuberculin, mallein, etc., for the diagnosis of disease. The preparation of vaccine and sera for all diseases against which preventive vaccination measures can be taken, are made in accordance with the latest advancements of science.

Wide Range of Laboratory Work.

Since Jan. 1, 1911, 32,000 doses of tuberculin, 1000 doses of anthrax vaccine and sixty gallons of hog cholera serum have been prepared in the laboratory and distributed among Pennsylvania farmers free of cost. These three products alone, if purchased in the market, would have cost practically $15,000; more than half the amount of money appropriated for laboratory work for the next two years. Hog cholera causes the largest proportionate loss of any disease of swine, and this industry represents a money value of over six million dollars. Much of the laboratory work has been done under adverse circumstances, but ample facilities are now provided for doing the work under the best and safest conditions and much better results may be expected in the future.

During the period referred to the laboratory examined 550 pathological specimens sent in by local practitioners. In many cases the cause of the disease was discovered and valuable information furnished for handling it. The diseases caused by poisonous plants and parasites have been made the subject of special investigation. The laboratory has gained an international reputation on account of its tuberculosis research work, and it is hoped that with the improved facilities and equipment furnished by the state that it will take a prominent place among those of the countries of Europe in veterinry research work.

The fight of the board against bovine tuberculosis is an impressive feature of its efficient service to the cattle industry. This was one of the first animal diseases to receive the board's attention. The plans for handling it were carefully made and judiciously executed. The first tuberculin testing in America was done by the late Dr. Leonard Pearson, and a vigorous campaign against this disease has been directed.

Menace of Bovine Tuberculosis.

The laws and rules regulating the board's work are recognized as the best by veterinarians throughout the country. Recently during six weeks 3742 head of cattle, brought into Pennsylvania for dairy purposes were submitted to the test. Of this number twenty-three failed to pass the test. During the same period 952 native cows were tested for farmers and forty were condemned and safely eliminated from the herds. Dealers are becoming more in sympathy with the work of testing animals properly before offering them for sale. Dairymen are much more careful in purchasing dairy cattle that are free from tuberculosis than they were formerly. The most intelligent realize that a dairy business cannot be conducted profitably unless the disease is checked.

The importance of keeping tuberculosis free herds is still more apparent in breeding herds. All states in which dairying is carried on extensively have laws requiring that dairy and breeding cattle must be properly tested before they can be accepted from another state or country. It is imperative that dealers, dairymen and breeders should observe the laws, rules and regulations for shipping cattle from one state to another in accordance with the requirements of the state live stock sanitary board. The federal authorities have wisely provided that cattle failing to pass a tuberculin test cannot be shipped or moved from one state to another.

Rabies is one of the most important diseases with which the state board has to deal. A rabid dog frequently bites and infects several animals in a herd, and the owner is not aware of its visit until the animal bitten shows symptoms of a strange disease that is seldom diagnosed properly until a veterinarian is called.

Decline of Sheep Industry.

A few years ago Pennsylvania ranked high as a sheep raising state, while at the present time comparatively few sheep are kept. The decline followed to a marked degree the development of mining in the western section of the state, not only because the mining operations decreased the amount of pasture lands, but because of the great number of foreigners who worked in the mines and gathered about them a vast horde of worthless dogs, over which they had little or no control. These dogs were underfed, not confined and roamed about, fought with other dogs and spread rabies through those sections.

During two months of this year thirty-four cases of rabies were reported from twenty-four counties, and in five additional cases the diagnosis of rabies was made at the laboratory. Quarantines to the number of 161 were served on 425 animals, and they were kept under close observation for 100 days. In four communities it was necessary to establish general quarntines, which covered territory ranging in size from one to five townships. In addition to suppressing and eradicating the disease the state board, through representatives in the field, is endeavoring to educate farmers as to the symptoms presented by different animals affected with rabies.

Anthrax has been prevalent in several sections of the state for years, and in some cases the losses have been high. For the past few years the board has recommended the annual spring vaccination of animals against anthrax in sections where the disease has been known to exist.

Expense Borne by the State.

The work is done atthe expense of the state and the results have been uniformly satisfactory. In addition to the annual spring vaccination 457 animals were immunized this year during July and August in five counties. Blackleg occurs occasionally in all portions of the state. It has many points in common with anthrax and preventive vaccination is the only means known for checking it. The state board has been remarkably successful in fighting it.

A quarantine against Texas fever has been maintained by the federal bureau of animal industry for years, yet occosionally native cattle are confined in sheds, driven across chutes or shipped in cars that have been contaminated by southern cattle and have not been properly cleaned or disinfected. During the past summer three outbreaks occurred in Pennsylvania. In each case the disease was recognized promptly and its spread immediately checked. Nearly 200 animals were exposed and twenty-four died.

The board employs agents to supervise slaughter houses in the rural districts of the state. As a result the rural slaughter houses now are better equipped, cleaner and far better managed than ever before. Many diseased carcasses, which would have found their way to the table if they had not been discovered by these agents, have been condemned and destroyed. The state provides money to pay the owner the appraised value of a condemned tuberculous carcass so he will not be tempted to dispose of it for food purposes to prevent his own loss.

Support of Tener Administration.

A milk hygiene service recently has been organized. Three qualified agents have been selected to travel through the state and assist the local agents in carrying out the requirements of the board. The bulk of the work will be carried on by local veterinarians. Their principal duties at first will be along educational lines.

The live stock sanitary board has received the support of every legislature since its organization. The favorable attitude of Governor John K. Tener is indicated by his deep interest in its work and his approval of measures intended to increase its efficiency. Governor Tener is president of the board. Its work is directed by Dr. C. J. Marshall, state veterinarian, and one on the highest authorities in this country on the diseases of domestic animals.

Oscar Peters, at one time a resident here but now located in Lancaster, this week was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Musser.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association will meet in the Y. M. C. A. building, Monday evening, December 4th, at eight o'clock.

Mrs. William Kurtz and daughters, Misses Annabelle and Emily, of Berlin, Pa., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kurtz, on High Street.

Mrs. F. W. Crider and Mrs. Louisa V. Harris will entertain the Bellefonte chapter, Daughter of the American Revolution, on the evening of Saturday, December 7.

Frank E. Naginey on Saturday went to Milton to see his sister, who is ill at her home at that place. Miss Irene Pressell, a trained nurse, accompanied him and will take care of his sister for the present.

Mrs. Jacob Finkelstine and daughter arrived home on Sunday after a most delightful visit to Philadelphia. Mr. Finkelstine went down to Lock Haven where he met them and accompanied them home.

The Basket Shop will hold its annual Christmas Sale in Petrikin Hall December 13th to December 23rd. Open Wednesday and Saturday evenings. A specialty will be made of baskets ranging from 25cts to $1.00 11-30-3t

Miss Anna Mann, of Lewistown, was an over-Sunday guest of Miss Myra Humes, returning to her home on Tuesday. She was pleasantly recalled by the numerous friends of the Mann family when the latter some years ago resided in Bellefonte.

The Lock Haven "Democrat" says: "A jolly bunch of prominent Bellefonte young men toured to this city in two large cars on Sunday afternoon, arriving here about 4 o'clock, and after enjoying themselves in fine style for a few hours, started on the return journey at about 9.30 o'clock. Those in the party were William Keichline, James Haupt, Howard Smead, Samuel Cherry, Clarence Swartz, Foote Miller, Guy Dale, Frank Sasserman, Winfield Love, Frank Bartley, John Sheckler, of Milesburg, and Edward Dean, of Tyrone."

For some reason or other, the arc lamp on Bishop Street, near the public school building, has played all sorts of capers of late. One very annoying habit of the big lamp is to go out of commission on unusually dark nights, and as a result several persons have sustained bad falls and painful bruises. On Friday night of last week Mrs. Howard Spangler had a hard fall at that point in the street, being severely cut and bruised. A daughter of Mr. Coxey, the grocer, and a daughter of John McSuley also had falls in the last week or two. Residents of that section of the town are threatening damage suits against the borough.

Mr. and Mrs. George Robb a week or two ago had a big butchering and dinner at their home near Coleville. One butchering a year is not sufficient for them, however, so on Tuesday Mr. Robb went over to Sandy Ridge where he helped Mrs. Robb's sister, Mrs. William Emery, carve up several fine, big porkers. He had been planning the trip for several months and when he learned that the Emery family were about ready to butcher he timed his visit to come in for the annual event which is the forerunner to a smokehouse packed full of hams, shoulder, sidemeat, sausage, etc.

William J. Dorworth, son of Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Dorworth, of this place, who has been superintendent of electric power and lighting for the big Proximity Company cotton mills, at Greensboro, North Carolina, for several years, this week accepted a position with the General Electric Company, with headquarters at Baltimore, Md. He was at one time identified with the latter company but later removed to Greensboro to supervise the installing of a new electric power and lighting system for the Proximity Company. He expects to take up his new position about February 1.

A traveling man, who spent Sunday at the Bush House, claimed to be the inventor of a steel rim automobile tire, so adjusted on springs as to secure the same ease and comfort made possible by pneumatic tires. He had blue prints of his patent device, which were shown to and examined with no little interest by other guests at the hotel. The steel rim is divided into four separate sections, which when fitted on the wheel are about half an inch apart. The springs are so arranged as to give the greatest resistance at the point of the greatest pressure. The steel rim and springs are fastened to the wheel by means of bolts and in case of accident the attachment may be removed and replaced with another in a few minutes time. The inventor has thus far built the attachment for heavy automobile trucks. Narrower and lighter attachments, he explained, will be made for pleasure cars.

Have you tried "93" Shampoo Paste? 25 cents the jar—at Green's.

Dr. Edith Schad and Miss Boal entertained at flinch on Tuesday evening.

Miss Justice Hoy, of Cresson, recently visited with friends here and also at Curtin.

Mrs. Edward Robb is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Lewis Miller, at Williamsport.

Miss Kathryn Edwards, of State College, visited this week with Bellefonte friends

Mrs. James Noonan leaves today for a few days' visit with Williamsport friends.

John Scholl spent Sunday at Scranton as the guest of his brothers, Leo and William.

Mrs. Pearle Condo, of York, is visiting at the Benjamin Brown home, on Howard Street.

Mrs. Blair Yarnell and three children, of Snow Shoe, are spending Thanksgiving week at the William McClellan home.

Mrs. George Kauffman and daughter Miss Ruth, of Altoona, are visiting at the home of John Love, on Reynold's Avenue.

Miss Florence Peters, formerly a resident of Bellefonte, who now lives at Lancaster, is visiting with friends here and at State College.

Dr. Eloise Meek, of Johnstown, who leaves today for India, was an over-Sunday visitor at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Gray Meek.

William T. Royer, of Tyrone, was an over-Sunday visitor in Bellefonte. Look out for the kidnapping of some other Bellefonte musician for that Tyrone band.

Joseph Katz, one of the big merchants at Lewistown, was an arrival in Bellefonte yesterday to eat his Thanksgiving dinner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Katz.

Miss Mary Blanchard leaves today for Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York, where she will conduct sales of the wonderful baskets which are made at the Bellefonte Basket Shop.

Application blanks for 1912 automobile licenses may be secured from W. Harrison Walker, Esq., who this week received a number from the State Highway Department, at Harrisburg.

John Hassinger, of Scotia, has not been very well for some time past and on Monday he went out to the Bellefonte hospital for treatment. It is hoped that a week or so there will put him back into his old-time condition.

John Klinger, Thomas Morgan and John D. Love, janitors at the public school buildings in Bellefonte, were recently given a very acceptable Thanksgiving reward in the shape of a substantial increase in their salaries.

LeRoy Locke, a son of Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Locke, played on the Haverford foot ball team, in the game with Bucknell on Saturday. Dr. Locke went down to Lewisburg to witness the game and was accompanied home by LeRoy, who remained here until Sunday night.

State College winds-up its football season today at Pittsbuag. Before sundown the boys from hereabouts will know whether their Thanksgiving dinner is to be one of feast or famine, for they departed for Pittsburg prepared to back State College to the limit and give odds if necessary. Pittsburg advices are to the effect that the Pittsburg team is not as strong as last year and that while the team's admirers are hopeful they are chary about putting up their money.

Rev. J. F. Hower, pastor of the Bellefonte United Brethren church, who was suddenly taken ill after preaching a sermon in his church more than a week ago, is still confined to the house and will not be able to preach on Sunday, next. In his absence Rev. S. E. Quimby will occupy the pulpit in the morning, at 10.30, and Rev. C. C. Shuey will preach in the evening, at 7.30. These same gentlemen preached for Mr. Hower last Sunday and all who heard them were greatly pleased.

The price of turkeys varied greatly during the last ten days. From Saturday until Tuesday the price was 16 cents a pound, live weight. Several farmers were willing to take 15 cents, while others held out for 18 and 20 cents and refused to sell at a lower figure. Hundreds of chickens and quite a number of turkeys were shipped from various points in the county to Altoona. Farmers in the upper end of Bald Eagle valley shipped their turkeys to Philipsburg, where, they said, they secured 18 and 20 cents a pound.

Harold V. Flagg, the State College student who was so badly injured by a fall in the gymnasium last week, is on the road to recovery, according to the physicians attending him at the Bellefonte hospital. When the young man was admitted to the hospital it was feared that his fractured skull and other injuries would cause his death. For several days he remained in an unconscious condition. His father and mother arrived here from Oil City, their home, several days ago, and yesterday they were overjoyed when they entered the sick-room to find that their son had improved sufficiently to recognize them. Just how long it will be until he is restored to health the physicians do not undertake to say, but the knowledge that their boy is to be saved makes for the loving parents today a day for real thanksgiving.

Considerable progress was made this week in the erection of the new bridge over Spring creek, nearby the Bush House. The unloading and sliding into position of the huge girders, which extend from one side of the creek to the other, attract no end of attention, most persons being curious to see how such ponderous and heavy pieces of metal would be handled. The bridge builders on the job apparently understand their business, for the big girders are moved about with little or no trouble. Each girdner is 64 feet long and weighs almost nine tons. Taking advantage of the exceptionally fine weatheron Monday the work of putting down the concrete curbing was begun. This will be finished before the street will be paved with brick according to present plans. It is also planned installing the new street lamps before the work of paving is begun. The electric wires leading to the lamps will be placed underground. Old timers volunteer the comment that the proposed improvements will make the lower end of town more attractive than has been the case in the last quarter of a century.

Mrs. A. O. Furst and son, James C., will spend Thanksgiving with the former's brother, William Chamberlin, at Milton.

Thomas K. Morris, of Pittsburg, was an over-Sunday visitor with Bellefonte friends. Tom. said that all hands out there are waiting for today's big football game with State College and that unbiased judges rather picked State College to win.

Who doesn't love a fine, juicy apple? Yesterday Mail-carrier Ed. Woods delivered to us a small box in which was a perfect specimen of the well known "Jonathan" apple, shipped from the Harrison Nurseries, at Berlin, Maryland. It was a beauty.

All Shad Are the Same.

Fishes are proverbial aids in magnifying facts. None of the finny tribe tends more to that end than the plain, ordinary, "house broken" shad. Floridians will testify that the St. Johns river shad is without equal; North Carolinians stoutly maintain that the Cape Fear river variety is the only kind worth eating; Washingtonians vow that the Potomac shad is perfection; Philadelphians swear by the Delaware product, and "h'l' old" New York simply thinks that any other shad than the Hudson river brand is unfit to eat. And thus they go—the farther north the greater seems to be the prevarication daring. The fact is, however, that they are all talking about the same old bony shad. In migrating north it goes up each of the rivers in turn. It is a salt water fish, in fact, which swims into fresh water to spawn and is captured when perpetuating the species. It is true that the residue from oil works, gashouses, etc., in the several large cities enumerated may give Mr. or Mrs. Shad a slightly local flavor, but none to be proud of or to provoke the unstinted partisan praise that is showered upon this much overrated fish.—New York Tribune.

The Judgment of Years.

A significant bit of wisdom, to be pondered over by the very young, whose griefs and disappointments seem so tragic, was that uttered by Mrs. Dolly Madison when she was over eighty years old and near her death. Her life had been fortunate and beautiful not only because circumstances had proved kind to her, but from the brightness and buoyancy of her temperament. She harbored no bitterness over past experiences, but life had taught her the unimportance of most trials which loom so gigantic in approaching. Not long before her death one of her nieces went to her for sympathy in some slight trouble.

"My dear," she said, "do not trouble about it. There is nothing in this world really worth caring for. Yes," she repeated, looking intently out of a window, "I who have lived so long repeat to you that there is nothing in this world below really worth caring for!"

Not Soon Enough.

A man who is now one of the leading members of the Stock Exchange was rather wild in his youth, which is not an exclusive characteristic of this member of the Stock Exchange. But this man was a favorite with his mother and generally called on her to help him out of his scrapes, and she usually responded freely, even lavishly. On one occasion, however, when his demands had been especially frequent and extravagant, it was with considerable trepidation that on discovering himself "the morning after" in a distant city and picked as clean as a new fledged sparrow, he penned the following heart moving appeal, to be sent C. O. D.:

"Send $50 and save disgrace."

His worst fears were realized when an hour later he received the reply from his mother, "Too late."—New York Tribune.

Had 'Em Again.

A company of motion picture actors and actresses gave a performance of "Chantecler" on the grounds adjoining the suburban studio of a film manufacturing company. A little later one of the actors, out for a walk, came upon a man seated by the roadside and weeping bitterly.

"What's the matter?" inquired the sympathetic player.

"I'm one of the patients at the sanitarium for bugs over yonder," explained the despairing one. "Yesterday the doc said I was well—boo-hoo—and that I could leave in a day or two. And what do you suppose I saw this morning? Roosters and hens six feet high and talkin' just like humans! If I get away from that sanitarium in ten years I'll be doing mighty well."—Lippincott's.

When Wild Winds Blow.

Most of us are apt to look on a storm as simply a strong wind blowing straight from one place to another. It is not so at all, for a storm wind always blows in a curve ,and a storm is not really a wind, but a whole wheel of winds with curving spokes. These curving spokes represent the various winds all blowing toward the hub. This hub is called the "eye" of the storm. It is the spot at which the barometer is lowest. On the rim of the wheel the barometer is high, and the nearer the hub the lower is the barometer. This wheel of winds is usually several hundred miles across.

Set Him to Thinking.

They had been talking as they walked. She had remarked pathetically:

"Oh, it must be terrible to a man to be rejected by a woman!"

"Indeed it must," was his response.

Then, after awhile, with sympathetic disingenuousness, she exclaimed:

"It doesn't seem that I could ever have the heart to do it."

And there came a silence between them as he thought it over.

Yucatan's Water Caverns.

Since Yucatan, where the Mayas built their strange cities, is of coral limestone formation, it follows that it would have been a desert but for its subterranean rivers and the cenotes or water caverns, which give access to them. The Mayas noted the courses of the underground streams and built their towns round the cenotes. Many cenotes are now found surrounded by ruins and give indications of the methods employed by the Mayas to reach their cool waters. In Uxmal a cenote about forty feet deep is inhabited by a peculiar species of fish. At Bolanchen there is a cenote having five openings in the rocks at the bottom of the cavern. Ladders made by tying three trunks together lead down a total distance of 1,400 feet, but the perpendicular depth from the surface to the water is not more than 500 feet.—Exchange.

Chinese and Chinaman.

On the subject of surprising modern words it is notable that the Oxford dictionary finds no earlier instance of "Chinaman," in the sense of a native of China, than 1854, when Emerson so used it. The previous word was "Chinese," from which the plural "Chineses" was formed by Milton and his contemporaries, and the false singular "Chinee" by modern Americans. But "Chinaman" in another sense, that of a dealer in china, was in use long before 1854. The Oxford dictionary gives three instances of it from London directories of 1772, 1801 and 1819, but does not mention that in 1763 one "John Crowther, Chinaman," was gazetted bankrupt. "Chinawoman" in a similar sense goes back to Ben Jonson.—London Chronicle.

A Monument to Cheerfulness.

The following quaint epitaph is to be seen in Crayford churchyard, Kent. It strikes one as one of the prettiest monuments to cheerfulness in all Merrie England: "Here lieth the body of Peter Isnel (thirty years clerk of this parish). He lived respected as a pious and a mirthful man and died on his way to church to assist at a wedding on the 31st day of March, 1811, aged seventy years. The inhabitants of Crayford have raised this stone to his cheerful memory and as a tribute to his long and faithful service."—London Standard.

Dutch Humor.

Here are two specimen jokes from Dutch papers of the day:

Mr. Newly Rich (to landlord) — I hear you have raised all your rents. Why haven't you raised mine as well? I can't imagine how I have merited such an insult to my dignity.

A.—I wouldn't like to be standing in your shoes just now. B.—Why? A.—Because they are in the cellar, and twenty tons of coal have been dumped over them.

BURGLARS! POLICE!!

Chief Dukeman and Dr. Locke Swoop Down on Intruder on Fire-escape.

If it happened to be a fairly dark night and you happened to notice some dark, mysterious object crouching upon a fire-escape in the rear of Dr. M. J. Locke's residence in Allegheny Street, you might suspect that a burglar was about to get in his deadly work. The next thing you might do would be to telephone for a policeman.

Well, Sunday night, last, was dark enough and somebody happened to notice a dark, mysterious object crouching upon the fire-escape in the rear of Dr. Locke's residence. The nearest telephone was called into play and in a jiffy Chief of Police Dukeman was swooping down upon the bold intruder. When he arrived at the scene of the intended crime, Chief Dukeman was reinforced by Dr. Locke. The two went into conference and decided to storm the fire-escape, rush in upon the burglar and capture him regardless of all danger and possible loss of life.

The attack was well planned and executed with a precision that would have won the admiration of anybody fortunate enough to be on hand to witness it. The burglar didn't scare for a cent, but instead jumped up and seemed genuinely delighted to see Dr. Locke.

The next time the Doctor gives his dog to junk dealer he will insist upon a written agreement that said dog shall not be permitted to sneak back home, craw up the rear fire-escape and necessitate rousing Chief Dukeman out of his usual Sunday night nap.

"The Rosary."

Seldom does an author portray such an important character as that of a Catholic priest, and have it meet with approval from the clergy. But this is just what has happened to Edward E. Rose, author of "The Rosary", which will be seen at Garman's Opera House next Tuesday evening, December 5. In "The Rosary" Mr. Rose has drawn a character of Rev. Brian Kelly, a Catholic priest, who interferes in domestic troubles between man and wife, and eventually shows the unlimited amount of good that can be done by a priest, not of conventional stage character, but a real man, a big man of faith, strength and conviction. The character has been endorsed by the clergy all over the country, and it is said to be the strongest character of the kind ever presented on the American stage.

The Bellefonte Academy football eleven lost to the Bloomsburg State Normal last Saturday by a score of 6—5. Each team scored one touchdown, but the Bellefonte boys failed to kick a goal.

Pleased with their Prizes.

Several of the winners in "The Republican" contest have taken occasion to express their admiration of the prizes awarded. Miss Verna Chambers, who won the automobile, was warmly congratulated by her fellow-students at the Lock Haven Normal. G. C. Snyder, of State College, who won one of the diamond rings, addressed the following letter to "The Republican:"

THE REPUBLICAN, Bellefonte, Pa.

Dear Friends:—I received the prize all O. K., and am well pleased with it. I have shown it to many of the subscribers I secured and also to others, all of whom think it a very handsome prize. I wish to extend to you and to the many friends who helped me in the contest my sincere thanks. I am,

Truly yours,
G. C. SNYDER.

Most people like a winner, but all love a good loser. "The Republican" takes off its hat to Miss Ruby Holter, of near Howard, who although unsuccessful, put up such a splendid fight to win a prize as to win the admiration of everybody. We ask every reader to note the fine, noble spirit which fills the following letter received from Miss Holter on Tuesday:

MR. EDITOR, Dear Sir:—I want to thank through the columns of your paper the many dear, kind friends who so readily and willingly gave me their support in the recent contest.

Sincerely,
RUBY HOLTER.

We consider it an honor to receive such a letter. To you, Miss Holter, we wish to say that you more than deserve to win in any contest you may enter. We are proud that you were one of our contestants. May yours be a very happy Thanksgiving Day.
